GOP SENATE HEAD, EX-BISHOP DIE

Two prominent Americans, Republican Everett Dirksen and former Episcopal Bishop James Pike, are dead.

GOP senate leader Dirksen died Sunday in Washington. His story is published on Pages 18 and 19 of the Times today.

Rev. Pike was buried today at St. Peter's Cemetery in a suburb of Tel Aviv, Israel. His body was found in the desert of the Holy Land on Sunday. His story is on Page 25.

U.S. Envoy Free

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — United States Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick said today his Brazilian kidnappers kept their faces masked at all times during the four days they held him captive. He described them as "intelligent fanatics".

"They were not the kind of people you would like to engage in an argument," he told a news conference less than a day after being freed in exchange for 15 Brazilian political prisoners. He was released after the prisoners were flown to Mexico by the Brazilian government.

The 61-year-old veteran diplomat said he had little inkling of his abductors' "ideological orientation," but added that they had nothing good to say about the Brazilian government.

In their ransom note, the kidnappers identified themselves as belonging to the National Liberation Action and the MR-8.

HIT ON HEAD

Elbrick was pistol-whipped on the head when he resisted getting in the kidnappers car last Thursday.

He said he was told about the reasons for the kidnapping "only in vague terms."

But if Elbrick's troubles were over, Brazil found itself faced with the threat of new strike and mounting violence by both left-wing and right-wing forces.

The urban guerrillas who staged the successful kidnapping vowed that they now would intensify their activities, "extending them to the country where we will awaken the enormous revolutionary potential of the rural workers."

Political observers here agree that the success of the rebels could provoke militant reactions from right-wing army officers opposing the conservative government.

SEIZE RADIO STATION

Saturday night a group of paratroopers seized the government radio station and broadcast an anti-government manifesto condemning the surrender to the guerrillas' demands.

Added to this is Brazil's recent history of right-wing violence, with police murder squads which have executed more than 3,000 petty criminals while Communist hunting squads have concentrated on leftists and liberals.

Elbrick, 61, was released Sunday night in the northern suburb of Tiba and told not to move for 15 minutes. But he immediately

Troller Owner Claims Soviets Rammed Boat

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver fisherman said today his troller was hit Sunday by a Soviet trawler — he claims it was deliberate — causing $800 damage and losing him a week's fishing at $500-$800 a day.

Jim Kaisla said his 50-foot boat, Bethune, was anchored in international waters off Ucluelet, Vancouver Island, when the Russian trawler T-881 drifted into the side of his vessel.

Bob McIndoe, inspector for the federal fisheries department, examined the boat and will report to Ottawa. He said the external affairs depart-

Saigon Accepts 'Tacit' Truce

SAIGON (Reuters) — The United States and South Vietnam today backed into a tacit three-day truce with the Viet Cong as the Communists mourned the death of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

The U.S. military command reported only one serious clash with Viet Cong ground forces—an ambush in Quang Tin province in which two American infantrymen were killed and five were wounded.

Six guerrilla shelling attacks—none of them on U.S. bases or camps—were reported since the start at 1 a.m. (10 a.m. PDT) Sunday of a 72-hour ceasefire declared by the Communists Friday to mark the mourning period for the North Vietnamese leader.

A U.S. command spokesman said Vietnamese forces launched 50 offensive and defensive operations today. There were no reports of serious fighting.

Fifteen hours after the beginning of the Viet Cong truce, the U.S. and South Vietnamese commands issued a joint statement brushing aside the question of a ceasefire but declaring that military operations would be "influenced" by what the guerrillas did.

The U.S. spokesman refused to elaborate, or to deny that Southern allied troops were ordered to keep the ceasefire. Observers considered the statement a tacit way of acknowledging the Viet Cong ceasefire without formally honoring the memory of the veteran Communist leader who died Wednesday.

Stanley Little told the biennial conference of his Canadian Union of Public Employees that talk of anti-inflationary programs urging voluntary wages and price restraint "made no sense."

The Saigon government Sunday ruled out a truce in the memory of its enemy. The U.S. went along with the South Vietnamese decision.

The joint statement today also emphasized that a wide-ranging round of guerrilla attacks took place between the announcement of the truce Friday and the time it actually started.

The two Southern allied commands said: "The scale of our military operations in the past has been influenced by the scale of enemy operations. During this period the scope of our operations will likewise be influenced by the nature of enemy operations."

In 12 previous truce periods—all to work-holidays—both sides said they fought only to defend themselves.

The big exception was the Communist offensive against South Vietnamese cities and towns at Tet in March, 1968.

That followed a last-minute decision by the government to observe the truce only in part in the country.

An official at the office of President Nguyen Van Thieu said the statement should not be taken as meaning the government accepted a ceasefire in memory of Ho Chi Minh.

Wage Freeze Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — The national president of a 130,000-member union warned today that trade unions could not promise to hold the line on wages even if business agreed to restrain prices.

Stanley Little told the biennial conference of his Canadian Union of Public Employees that talk of anti-inflationary programs urging voluntary wages and price restraint movement will probably pass it along to Moscow.

Kaisla said in an interview the 180-foot stern trawler forced him to cut his anchor loose and its "laughing and jabbering" crew made no move to apologize.

"There is no question that this was a deliberate move by the Russians to get me out of there," contended Kaisla. He said the Soviet trawler began fishing after he moved away.

His boat was half a mile from a group of British Columbia vessels anchored over Big Bank, off the west coast of Vancouver Island. It was, he said, carrying its white anchor light.

'Nothing Sinister' On Mystery Train

EDMONTON (CP) — Mystery continues to shroud a train which is making repeated runs between Calgary and Edmonton, but a CNR spokesman said Monday "there's nothing sinister about the damn thing."

Donald Purves, vice-president of the mountain region, said in Vancouver:

"I called out to the guy on the train, 'what would happen if I just happened to wander over and try to climb aboard, would I get shot?'

"The guy said 'probably,' and he didn't smile when he said it."

Mr. O'Hara said one of his sources told him that "nobody gets off the train, dead or alive," until Wednesday—and they have a special compartment to keep the body in if anybody should die."

Mr. O'Hara said the train has 12 passenger cars, a dome car, a baggage car, and a canteen, pulled by three diesel engines. It left Calgary, apparently empty, at about 2 p.m. Saturday. It stopped at Beiseker and Conrich, two hamlets north of Calgary, and arrived in Edmonton with about 60 persons on board.

Mr. O'Hara said his sources told him the train will shuttle between Calgary and Edmonton until Wednesday.

In Calgary, a reporter of radio station CKXL went to the Sarcee marshalling yard to get a story for himself.

Dale O'Hara said that when he arrived at the yard he was talking to a CNR security official.

"They didn't want to go to a hotel; they wanted to get away. There is nothing macabre or extraordinary about it in any way. It's very simple—they wanted privacy. I guess their wish to avoid publicity backfired on them."

Similar charges were made earlier by Syria and Iraq.

In a radio broadcast Sunday night, Israel's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Haim Bar Lev, announced plans to establish five or six new paramilitary settlements next year to curb Arab guerrilla activity. He said some of the settlements would be in occupied territory.

In another broadcast Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said the United States would continue to be the main supplier of arms to Israel, "in accordance with the policy she has pursued for many years."

He said that Israel maintained military superiority.

Reds Endorse Free Choice In Politics

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)

The Soviet Union and Poland, which last year participated in the Warsaw pact intervention in Czechoslovakia, have joined Czechoslovakia and Romania in proposing that the United Nations endorse the principle that people have "the right to determine freely their political status."

The proposal, made public today, was offered by the four states for consideration by the special committee on principles of international law which is holding closed-door meetings here.

The Soviet-led invasion was designed to block liberal political forces in Czechoslovakia. Romania upheld the Czechoslovak liberals and declined to join other Warsaw pact countries in the military intervention.

The document today included a proposed prohibition against colonial powers "undertaking any armed action or repressive measures against peoples under colonial rule."

Police Halt Nude Scamp In Park

A 17-year-old Victoria boy was arrested on sunny Saturday afternoon after a nude scamp through Beacon Hill Park.

When police arrived at the park bandshell at 5 p.m. they found the youth sitting quietly on the grass with no clothes on.

He was arrested for nudity in a public place, and spent the night in city jail cells.

A second youth, David Sainsbury, 20, of 570 Simeon, was arrested as a result of the same incident.

He pleaded not guilty today in central court to charges of obstructing a police officer and possession of LSD.

He was remanded for continuation of the case.

Pickets Seek Compensation For Pollution

LONG HARBOR, Nfld. (CP) — About 200 Placentia Bay fishermen today blocked a road leading to the Electric Reduction Co. of Canada phosphorus plant and demanded immediate compensation for income losses blamed on pollution.

The men want the company to pay compensation for May, June and part of July when the northern reaches of the bay were closed to fishing by federal order.

Day shift workers at the plant here were turned back by the roadblock. The overnight shift was still in the building.

Company officials read to the fishermen a statement issued Sunday saying Ercro was establishing a $300,000 fund to provide compensation for losses in fishermen's income.

Signers carried by the fishermen said the fund is not large enough to provide adequate compensation.

The company statement disavowed any legal responsibility for compensation but said the firm wants to make a contribution "as a responsible member of the community."

The bay was re-opened to federal scientists declared it free of pollution.

Main Break Floods Basements

Water poured into basements on Hillside and Grosvenor Streets after a major water main burst Saturday afternoon on Hillside.

The break, which was reported to city police at 4:45 p.m., spurted six inches of water down the road for several blocks until a city workman arrived three quarters of an hour later to turn off the underground tap.

Cor Rous, 1358 Hillside, Mrs. Ethel Keating, 2718 Grosvenor, and Paul Postman, 2725 Grosvenor, suffered flooded basements. All were storing furniture, clothing and keepsakes in their basements.

Rous, who came to Victoria from Holland just three months ago, had his car flooded in his basement garage.

The water main broke at a branch line taking water to an apartment block at 1341 Hillside.

A block containing about 25 homes, business and apartments, went without water while repairs were made. It was the area bounded by Hillside, Grosvenor and Cedar Hill.

A minor three-car accident of a result of a traffic jam caused by the gushing water. A car driven by Neil A. Fraser, 3204 Frechette, struck the rear of a stopped car driven by William Keep, 3980 Bow, which was pushed into the rear of a car driven by Leslie Robinson, 1473-Hillside.

MUNRO
sham and shameMunro Flays Lawyers For Dollar Drive

HAMILTON (CP) — Health and Welfare Minister John Munro has called the legal profession "a sham" and "a shame."

Mr. Munro, a lawyer himself, said today there is overwhelming evidence that the law is not the same for the poor as for the middle and upper classes.

"Some of us seem to be deliberately seeking profit from human misery," he said.

He told a lawyers' luncheon that instead of protecting the poor and needy from exploitation, many lawyers are using the law "to enable the rich to get richer and the corrupt to become more powerful."

The luncheon is sponsored by the St. Thomas More Lawyers' Guild and is held after the annual Red Mass that precedes the opening of the Ontario Supreme Court's fall assizes.

Mr. Munro said too many lawyers are pre-occupied with social and economic rewards "such as our fee structure which goes towards making lawyers the second highest-paid occupation in Canada."

"Since when should people supposedly dedicated to building a just society have such a high annual income, anyway?" he said.

"I say it's about time our profession changed a little and concentrated more on relieving human suffering than causing it."

"You know, there is a lot of glaring hypocrisy uttered in this connection. I have met quite a number of lawyers who are extremely self-righteous about the subject of welfare and assistance to the less fortunate."

He said many lawyers are deriving a substantial income from archaic laws that maintain the status quo. He referred specifically to:

—Requiring "silly, but costly examination procedures" that add to home prices;

—Working on loopholes to get around corporate tax laws;

—Drawing up contracts to protect the sale of shoddy, substandard goods.

—Pocketing brokerage fees on second mortgages at user's rates, "which are sometimes guaranteed to see someone ultimately dispossessed of what he has tried hard to hold."

Philip's Itinerary In City Released

Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, will be the guest of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson at Government House during his three-day visit to Victoria Oct. 26-28.

He will arrive here from Vancouver Sunday, Oct. 26, at 6 p.m. aboard the yacht Fifer, owned by Clarence Wallace, a former lieutenant-governor.

Time and place of docking have not yet been arranged.

Prince Philip's official itinerary in the city was announced today.

Monday morning, Oct. 27, he will call on Premier Bennett at the Legislative Buildings and Mayor Hugh Stephen at the City Hall.

After a visit to Reynolds Secondary School at 11 a.m., he will be guest of honor at a luncheon in the Empress Hotel given by the B.C. government.

In the afternoon at 2:45 p.m. he will present awards to boys at Shawnigan Lake School as part of his awards plan to encourage young people to excel in community service and the pursuit of hobbies.

He will inspect a guard of honor of Canadian Army cadets in the Bay Street Armory at 6 p.m. and return to Government House for a state dinner at 8 p.m.

Tuesday morning, Oct. 28, Prince Philip will visit Dean Heights School and the Maritime Museum at Bastion Square.

At noon he will address a meeting of the women's and men's Canadian Clubs of Victoria in the Empress Hotel ballroom. Mrs. D. Leslie Macdonell, president of the women's "To coin the understatement of the year, I'm glad to be back," Elbrick said as he arrived at his residence, haggard and unshaven.

"And I'm grateful to the Brazilian government for taking the action necessary to bring about my liberation."

The 14 men and one woman, who arrived in Mexico City several hours before guerrillas in Rio de Janeiro freed U.S. Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick, carried only small valises or paper parcels containing their belongings. None had any money. All wore blue denim prison uniforms.

The Mexican interior ministry will pay for their food and lodging for a month, after which the exiles may either find work in Mexico or choose to leave the country. Some are expected to go to Cuba, but others said they wanted to return to Brazil to fight the "dictatorship."

Soldiers Restoring Order After Belfast Man Killed

From AP-Reuters

BELFAST (CP) — Sectarian feuding was back to boiling point in Belfast today, and British troops moved to the centre of the city after a young Protestant was killed during an apparent gasoline bomb attack on a Roman Catholic home.

British Army officials said the man was killed by unknown gunmen firing from a car. A companion was wounded and taken to hospital. Police said windows of the house were broken and three unexploded gasoline bombs lay near the dead man's body.

Neighbors identified him as Jack Todd, 23, a member of a Protestant "peace patrol." Several of these groups have been patrolling Belfast since last month's riots.

Other reports described him as a Protestant vigilante.

Todd was the ninth person to die in Northern Ireland since sectarian strife peaked in bloody riots and arson in mid-August.

An angry Protestant crowd gathered after the shooting and army patrols hurried to the scene, but Joseph McKeagie, chairman of the Shankill Defence Association, a militant Protestant group, persuaded the crowd to disperse.

The army said it was leaving the investigation to the Royal Ulster Constabulary which posted men armed with automatic weapons at each end of the street. The police said they were treating the case as murder at this stage.

The shooting took place in the Allot Street district in west Belfast where both Protestants and Catholics live. The area has been one of the flashpoints in recent riots and today some of them, apparently as a counter to Catholic barricades moving their furniture and going to refugee centres or exclusively Catholic areas.

At least eight buildings, including a hotel, were set ablaze during the night by gangs of Protestant and Catholic extremists who roamed the streets. The fire damage was not extensive.

During the night the troops extended their control to more than half of Belfast as they struggled to hold the Catholic and Protestant gangs apart. Police reported several cases of looting, and Catholic owners of two taverns and a restaurant said they received threats that their establishment would be burned.

As another week of tension and economic strain began in Northern Ireland, there were more barricades on the streets.

For the first time in the capital, British troops fired tear gas cartridges Sunday at a Protestant crowd of about 3,000 that threatened to invade a Catholic district.

JEER ARMY

The jeering crowd ignored demands to move back behind their barricades but scattered when the gas went off.

The clash was the first between British troops and the Northern Irish since the army moved in to take control after the fighting last month from the Catholic hoardes.

There are two other clandestine stations broadcasting in Belfast. They are believed to be based in Catholic districts.

Ho Mourning Tribute Hot Political Issue

HONG KONG (WP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin began paying ceremonial homage to Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi as Moscow accused Communist China of having shown "disrespect" for the late North Vietnamese president and his people.

An official Vietnam news agency dispatch, transmitted here Sunday afternoon, said that Kosygin arrived in Hanoi on Saturday accompanied by Konstantin Katushev, communist party central committee secretary, and Mikhail Isayev, vice-president of the supreme Soviet presidium.

The agency reported that Kosygin was met at the airport by Truong Chinh, the national assembly chairman, and Premier Pham Van Dong and the same North Vietnamese leaders who greeted Chinese Premier Chou En Lai on his brief visit to Hanoi Thursday.

In a Moscow radio broadcast Sunday, meanwhile, the Russians apparently sought to use the question of Soviet and Chinese relations with the Vietnamese communists as a weapon against their Peking adversaries.

Referring to the brevity of Chou's visit to Hanoi, the Chinese-language Moscow broadcast monitored here said that his sudden departure . . . should be considered disrespect for the heroic Vietnamese people and their leader." The broadcast added:

The broadcast, obviously intended for Chinese rather than Vietnamese consumption, appeared to observers here to betray a note of Soviet irritation at . . . Having been beaten to Hanoi by Chou En Lai and his delegation,

Nasser Expected in Moscow For Middle East War Review

CAIRO (WP) — Egypt's President Gamal Abdul Nasser is expected to visit Moscow within the next two weeks for policy talks, according to reliable diplomatic sources here.

Nasser has just completed a round of talks with the leaders of Jordan, Syria, Iraq, Sudan and Algeria on the Arab-Israeli conflict and can be expected to brief Soviet leaders on the views of those leaders.

While in the Soviet Union, according to these sources, Nasser may also undergo treatment for a leg ailment for which he was treated in Russia last year.

The Egyptian president and Soviet officials are expected to conduct a full-scale review of the tense Middle East situation and the status of big-power efforts to find a peaceful solution for the Arab-Israeli crisis.

Russia is Egypt's principal arms supplier and makes the Egyptian case at the big-power conference table.

Although the emphasis of the abbreviated Arab summit was on military planning against Israel, Nasser has not given up on the possibility of a peaceful solution.

Tide in the Affairs . . . ?

ONE OF THE GREAT DANGERS in the emergence of the United States as the leader of the West and the chief world power opposed to Communism was that the vast military machine which was created to support those two roles might get out of hand. The possibility was noted by General Dwight D. Eisenhower in his retirement address eight years ago, when he warned against "the acquisition of unwarranted influence . . . by the military-industrial complex". And he went on to say that "only an alert and knowledgeable citizenry" could direct the machine along the traditionally peaceful paths of the United States and so achieve both security and liberty together.

That merging of military and peaceful trends has not yet been successfully achieved. There are many people within the United States and among the friends of that country, who see the military-industrial complex as having won too great an influence over the nation and its resources and embarked on a course of increasing emphasis on military force as the answer to political problems. They cite the quick extension of United States military power to the Dominican Republic at a time of crisis, and the original apparently unstoppable drain of men and equipment to Vietnam, as examples of the military-industrial complex in action and its influence on public opinion and legislative thought.

Although the United States has been a great factor in world peace in recent years, historically it has not consistently been a non-aggressive country. The domestic tradition has always been tinged with frontier philosophy, in which each man was his own defender—and carried a gun for that purpose.

Public opinion in early struggles was invariably with the government. Even in the two world wars, although the United States did not enter until well along in the conflicts, the eventual public support

Down to the Fish on Farms?

THE FACT THAT LOWER VANCOUVER ISLAND SPORTS FISHERMEN are briefly enjoying a salmon bonanza in Juan de Fuca Strait should not obscure the fact that for commercial fishermen 1969 has been a disastrous summer. Officials fear it may turn out to be the worst year in history for the industry.

Scientists have not been able to determine the reason for the failure of the Fraser River pink salmon run this year, although they attribute the drop in central coast waters to drought and subsequent flooding that almost wiped out the 1965 spawning run.

Whatever the cause of the Fraser River decline it should point up that the days are numbered when this province can take for granted a bountiful salmon harvest. Some experts predict that as a result of pollution and disruption of tributary streams the Fraser system could be barren of fish within 25 years.

Obviously something must be done if we are not to lose this important part of the province's wealth. The new measures being introduced by the federal fisheries department to control the number of boats may improve efficiency in the industry, but they won't help with the main problem, which is to preserve or increase present fish stocks.

The recent announcement that a new $1-million salmon hatchery is to be built on the coast is a move in this direction, but it is apparently designed more to build up sports fishing stocks, which are also growing in importance to the province's economy.

What seems to be needed now is a heavier emphasis on research into new methods of raising fish. It may be possible to check pollution of our rivers and streams, but to continue to rely on the natural spawning process may be unrealistic and uneconomic. We are told by scientists that there will be an increased demand for protein foods as population pressures cut back farm land. The sea is the natural place to turn but it is unlikely that present techniques will be able to meet the demand. Greater control over spawning, hatching, growth and harvesting would seem to hold the best answer. The day of the "fish farm" may not be far off.

Man, Ape, or What?

IN RECENT YEARS GENETISTS have claimed that science will someday be able to use selective methods to produce a human being of predetermined characteristics—a superman, physically, mentally and emotionally. But those who foresee such a development draw back from it for an obvious reason. They are not prepared to play God in deciding what should be the ideal, or ready to say who should be given the powers of such decision.

The problem assumes new significance with the forecast that by the 1980s a new type of creature could be developed to do the menial chores of the world—a sort of working monkey. This would be an anthropoid whose chromosomes had been changed to produce what would apparently be a new sub-species, capable of performing slave tasks.

Such speculation has led scientists to meet philosophers at Santa Barbara to examine the implication of advanced biological research. The objective is to stop the unco-ordinated application of new techniques that could have far-reaching and disastrous consequences to organic life on the planet. But the moral implications are also obvious. Man has not yet shown enough competence in managing himself to assume control of a sub-human or a super-animal, whichever his new creation might turn out to be.

ELECTION EXPENSES

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Better Way to Pay for Democracy

A HUMBLE FRIEND OF MINE, a fellow British Columbian and an ardent partisan of the NDP, holds a few shares in a giant Canadian business corporation. Even for a philosophical socialist this is no crime. He saved a nest egg through a lifetime of toil to support his old age and is not dependent on the charity of the state, which is no crime, either, unless you regard old age itself as criminal, a common view among the young. In any case, my friend, an innocent sort of person, believes that the money invested in the corporation's shares is his own and should be used to his advantage.

So, for the most part, it is, because the corporation has good management and high profits. But at election times, he tells me, some of the money is not used to his advantage as he judges it. The corporation gives campaign funds to the Social Credit party, not to the NDP. It spends this money where he does not want it spent and, in his opinion, against the vital interests of society.

Right or Wrong

Whether he is right or wrong about the interests of society need not concern us here. He is right, however, in thinking that we have a queer way of conducting elections when shareholders are forced, indirectly and invisibly, to finance political parties that they oppose and detest. Under the present system there is no escape for the shareholder, so long as he remains a shareholder. His own money is spent as he may not want it spent for what he may consider evil purposes.

Of course he can escape the moral dilemma by selling his shares, perhaps at a loss, but there is no escape for society. It is locked into a secret arrangement by which corporations are regularly shaken down, against their will, and the political party is then beholden to its benefactors, or victims. Both sides to the transaction resent it but what are they to do when the public refuses to face the cost of elections, openly and honestly?

That cost, as we have seen in British Columbia, of late, is high and, like most costs, getting higher. For some odd reason, nevertheless, the public seems to imagine that political parties, unlike any other living organism, shouldn't need nourishment at all, or at least not much, if they are as pure as they profess to be. Apparently they can live on air or, with Marie Antoinette's French peasants, can eat cake.

The party, in fact, is widely regarded as a kind of necessary evil, to be tolerated but not respected and assuredly not financed by the self-respecting voter.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Secure in his own private morality, he seldom gives any party a dollar and yet he wonders why it must get its money through the corporation's back door.

Our recent British Columbia election was a classic example of the system. As everyone knows, the Social Credit party had all the campaign funds it could possibly spend and they did not come from any fairy godmother. In addition, the Bennett government spent public revenues to buy vast advertising space and ostensibly explain various official regulations to the ignorant citizenry, though everyone knew that it was merely praising its own achievements and asking for votes. It was brainwashing the voter with his own tax money.

Ruin Assured

I doubt that the government could have lost the election if it had not spent a cent, since the NDP with little money and many big mistakes, had assured its own ruin in advance. But no one can say that the system is fair or democratic when one party has unlimited sinews of war and others are denied them. No one can doubt that the party receiving these lavish gifts is obligated to the givers, or that the givers will hand on their costs to the public by one means or another. Do not ask for whom the cash register rings. It rings for you and me.

Now, I happen to think that Canadian politicians are honest above the average of most nations, far more honest than we were in my youth. They are equally hypocritical in trying to pretend that the democratic process can be financed by anyone but the people themselves, and that the corporations actually financing it expect nothing in return beyond the spiritual rewards of sheer patriotism.

FROM WASHINGTON

Move to Weed Out Foreign Commitments

PRESIDENT NIXON'S foreign policy is basically an attempt to begin the ending of the cold war, but not in the expectation of any foreseeable end to the Communist super powers' challenge to the rest of the world. His aim is to lessen the predominance of the military aspect of that challenge, which he feels the Soviets must ultimately find also to be in their own self-interest, if the U.S. can only exercise a non-threatening leadership in presenting the case.

Mr. Nixon's major step is to try to isolate the basic defence interests of the

If these repulsive customs are to be changed we must agree among ourselves that political campaigns—the final right to choose—are the very core and essence of democracy, that political parties are the necessary tools of the process and that they cannot operate in the age of mass communication without money.

Groundless Fear

Certainly they do not require all the money that a ruling party can get from its business friends by blandishment, promise or threat. Certainly such a party, like Social Credit in British Columbia, spends too much, often unnecessarily, out of groundless fear of the voters. Yet we must make up our minds that democracy never comes cheap and that its legitimate costs will be borne by us and no one else, whether we bear them openly or secretly, honestly or dishonestly.

If democracy is worth its price then its first charge, surely, should be levied, by a known and authorized formula, on its beneficiaries, the people, as a whole. Campaign expenses, for legitimate parties of all stripes should be paid out of taxes and taken from no other sources. Those who break the law and get money from other sources should be put in jail.

This may sound like a radical notion but it was proposed more than half a century ago by no one less than Sir Clifford Sifton, the most practical Canadian politician of his time. And today, with striking irony, the West Germans, of all people, are teaching us democracy by charging election expenses to the public treasury. We should not need that lesson from such a teacher.

It's a familiar pattern of behavior in school yards and it has merely been transferred to the streets. It seems to have contributed something to a certain school of public opinion: That policemen have a necessary and legitimate function. Perhaps it will even persuade those who once saw a profound philosophy in flower power that a well-washed youth may not after all be a total loss.

Hard Look

Toronto Daily Star

In searching for places to cut swollen government spending, the Trudeau cabinet is having a hard look at family allowances—and with excellent reason.

The "baby bonus" program is one of the largest items in the federal budget; it now costs about $600 million a year. Yet it is increasingly doubtful whether the Canadian people get any benefit proportional to this massive expenditure.

When family allowances were introduced in the 1940s, they were conceived of as an anti-poverty measure to make it easier for low-income families with several children to make ends meet.

It was a worthy aim, but unhappily it conflicted with the principle of "universality"—no means test—to which Canadian governments are devoted. So the decision was taken to pay the bonus to all families with young children regardless of income.

This has had two unfortunate results. Since everyone was included in the plan, the individual payments have had to be kept small. They now vary from $6 to $8 a month, depending on the age of the child. This is of little help to a poor family today.

Yet at the same time hundreds of millions of dollars have been dribbled out over the years to people who needed no help from the taxpayers.

This is a thoroughly unsound and indefensible policy, and a revision is long overdue.

'Poor Thing'

Winnipeg Free Press

It began to look in the prime ministerial assault case, as though Prime Minister Trudeau had gone in swinging and belted half the youthful four-letter men in Canada. He hit me too, me too, a couple more declared when the act got under way, and one had a mental image of Pierre Elliott Trudeau with six arms, like a Gallic James Cagney.

The justice who heard the complaint found the evidence "inconclusive." He must be a kindly man. No doubt he considered the really serious side of the affair, the use of the courts frivolously to embarrass or bring into public contempt men of high public standing. And thereby to bring into contempt, and to abuse, the courts.

It is unlikely to happen again, because in future the police are sure to get to the demonstrators before the prime minister does. In the end the affair was trivial. It may even have done some good. For a great many people it put the status and the qualities of the four-letter demonstrators into a better public perspective as rather uncouth, dreary and inconsequential specimens who have had all the rope they needed to hang their tattered shingle in view. It's a poor thing. It advertises the fact that those who couldn't handle school nonetheless know exactly how to handle the complex affairs of this nation and the world: Brawl a few obscene words at a public servant and make menacing approaches.

It's a familiar pattern of behavior in school yards and it has merely been transferred to the streets. It seems to have contributed something to a certain school of public opinion: That policemen have a necessary and legitimate function. Perhaps it will even persuade those who once saw a profound philosophy in flower power that a well-washed youth may not after all be a total loss.

By RICHARD PURSER

Wide Publicity

Examination of the unplanned, uncontrolled, and often little-known growth of U.S. foreign involvement became extensive after Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright gave wide publicity to the proings by himself and others into the origins of the Vietnam war. President Nixon placed himself well in tune with the new public opinion with his cry of "no more Vietnams" and his desire to scale back U.S. commitments to equate more directly with U.S. needs.

Mr. Nixon attracted some attention early in July when he ordered U.S. military personnel and supporting civilian employees abroad reduced by 20,000, at an annual saving of $75 millions. Troops committed to NATO were not affected by the order. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield had some sharp criticism. First, he said, the action was "a drop in the bucket." There would be real progress if the figure of 1.75 million U.S. servicemen, dependents and civilian employees on bases abroad were cut in half. Second, the cuts should include NATO. (Sen. Mansfield has long fought for lower U.S. contributions to NATO.)

But the difference between Mr. Nixon's actions and Sen. Mansfield's criticism points up what Mr. Nixon's policy really is. It must be recalled that some Americans obsessed by U.S. power, such as former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, have described any attempt at reducing indiscriminate wielding of that power abroad as "neo-isolationism."

Since Mr. Nixon is anything but an isolationist, he is anxious to avoid over-hasty action that could lead friend or foe to believe he is retreating into a "Fortress America." He thinks great leaps in the conduct of foreign policy are dangerous and bound to be misunderstood, preferring small steps which stand a better chance of being explained in a safe context.

Further, he wishes to distinguish between the multitude of secretly written or even totally unwritten pseudo-commitments abroad that have resulted from a vast, impersonal bureaucracy trying to find work to justify its growth, and the true commitments, made with the full knowledge of the American people and ratified by their elected representatives. NATO is true commitment, and as such will be honored.

Mr. Nixon feels U.S. credibility requires that the honoring of genuine commitments not be swept away as the U.S. rids itself of its pseudo-commitments. (Credibility equally requires that the latter be swept away; they cannot effectively be honored in practice because their de facto "obligation" is so often that the U.S. prop up ailing foreign governments.)

Bad Example

The U.S. can streamline its contribution to NATO but cannot honorably reduce it except through discussions with allies. This belief explains why Canada's unilateral reduction in NATO force levels was regarded here as such a bad example.

Late in August Defence Secretary Melvin Laird took another and larger step beyond Mr. Nixon's July move, cutting 100,000 men and $1.5 billions from the Pentagon's plans for the current fiscal year as part of planned cuts which will later double those figures.

Meanwhile, action moves quietly on other fronts. The U.S. at the peak of its flag-waving abroad, left as a legacy of John Foster Dulles, had 452 major and 2,208 minor bases abroad. Now according to U.S. News and World Report, the figures are 343 and 1,927, for a total reduction of 396 bases. Most of this took place under former Secretary of Defence Robert McNamara in the interests of efficiency, but can be expected to continue in the interests of policy.

Paradox of Moshe Dayan: Folk-Hero, Hate-Figure

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

In the quarter-century since the end of Hitler's war, only two generals have achieved international reputations. Both come from small countries with a strong sense of national purpose.

General Giap remains a shadowy figure; but the spotlight of publicity has played him more or less on Moshe Dayan for the past 12 years.

In his own country he is both a folk-hero and the object of fierce criticism among the political elite; to the Arabs he is the enemy incarnate; to the New Left, the personal instrument of American imperialism; to the gross-minded Western public, a glamorous and daunting figure, who has erased the traditional archetype of a Jew.

At a popular level he has completely altered the Israeli image, both for better and for worse.

More sophisticated Israelis are uneasily aware of this. They feel a little ashamed of Dayan: this was not what Israel was supposed to be about.

On the other hand it is, to some extent, what Israel has been forced to become. And they feel safer when he is around.

Lose a Nation

Of Admiral Jellicoe, Churchill wrote that he was constantly aware that he could lose the war in a single afternoon.

There have been times when Dayan must have felt he could lose an entire nation in 20 minutes. Such knowledge is not an easy burden to carry.

Moreover, Dayan gives the impression that he is painfully aware of his limitations and resents the need to live up to his legend.

At close quarters he does not radiate glamour. He is the wrong side of 50, has led a hard life and looks it. He has the suggestion of a paunch.

The eyepatch which makes him instantly recognisable to an admiring world covers, in prosaic fact, a disfigurement which causes him intermittent pain and constant irritation.

In 1941 a bullet smashed his binoculars while he was reconnoitring a Vichy position in the Lebanon; he lost his eye and passed 18 hours in agony before he could be carried to hospital.

The twist to his mouth which some see as a symptom of reckless cynicism is more likely the imprint of suffering. Dayan has a taste for solitude in a crowded and gregarious community.

His manners have the gracelessness which (other Israelis claim) are the mark of the sabra. He does not suffer fools gladly; indeed he does not suffer anyone gladly. He wants affection but is not prepared to ask for it or even work for it.

'Resentful Exile'

He has the air of a resentful exile in a country which regards him as its national hero.

Yet Dayan undoubtedly belongs in Israel. In Israeli terms, indeed, he has all the credentials of aristocracy. The elite are those families which emigrated from Eastern Europe, especially Russia, in the decade before 1914.

His father was a pioneer immigrant from Kiev, the son of a rabbi, a contemporary of Levi Eshkol and Ben-Gurion. He helped to found both Degania, the first kibbutz, and a workers' movement which merged with BG's Poale Zion into Mapai, the ruling party.

His mother was also Ukrainian, the daughter of a Zionist intellectual, reaching Palestine in 1913. His wife Ruth is the daughter of a successful Jerusalem lawyer from Bessarabia. Dayan was both born into the establishment and married into it.

His youth and early manhood are characteristic of the second-generation Israeli brought up on a moshav or co-operative farm, educated at an agricultural school, active in the Haganah, the Zionist defence force.

Dayan had his first scrap with the Arabs at the age of 13, and later became an expert in devising defensive systems for the kibbutzim — erecting tower-and-fence per-meters, which could literally be set up overnight, for newly-established settlements.

When the British mandate authorities set up the Jewish Supernumerary Police, Dayan joined it along with thousands of other members of the Haganah, taking his real orders from undercover commanders.

Chaotic Conditions

In the chaotic conditions of the late thirties he became a capable and experienced Arab-fighter in the same way as adventurous American farmers became Indian-fighters on the Far West Frontier; his Israeli critics say he has never been anything more.

Arrested for organising an illegal officers' course, he served 16 months in the grim fortress-prison of Acre before being released to fight the Vichy forces.

The British used him on various assignments, including the creation of a wireless intelligence network.

But Dayan never joined the British army; nor would he have any truck with the elitist Palmach formations, based on the kibbutzim, formed about this time. His interest in politics was marginal and he has never, at any time, been a party apparatchik.

Hence, in the events which marked the foundation and military survival of the Jewish state, Dayan played a comparatively minor part.

His lack either of formal military training, or of political pull, retarded his promotion; Yigal Allon, for instance, though three years his junior, soon outstripped him.

Dayan successfully commanded a scratch armoured battalion in the war of liberation, and took part in diplomatic negotiations with France; the other, Dayan, prepared for a lightning strike, the prime object of which was to free the Straits of Tiran. The result was the Sinai campaign.

But he did not emerge as a significant military figure until the early fifties when, after attending staff college in Britain, Ben-Gurion made him Chief of Operations in the General Staff.

Small Nucleus

By this time, General Yigal Yadin had created the basis of the modern Israeli army: a grouping of regional reservists around a small professional nucleus. But its shortcomings were evident.

Dayan had long held the view that Israel could look for salvation and security neither to the West nor to the Soviet bloc; she must depend entirely on her own resources — that is on the skill and ruthlessness of her army.

This meant intensive training, a high degree of readiness and the willingness to strike first and hard.

As chief of operations, and from December 1953 as Chief of Staff, Dayan created the Israeli deterrent, trained to carry out massive reprisals along the whole length of the frontier and, if necessary, fight a preventive war at short notice.

Dayan owed his promotion almost entirely to the personal patronage of Ben-Gurion, whose military instrument he became.

Between them they developed a politico-military realpolitik which was anathema to the conventional, politicians of the Mapai establishment, represented by Moshe Sharett, but which has been singularly determined Israeli policy.

Sharett believed in world opinion, in the process of diplomacy, in international forums such as the UN; Israel's case could be won by patience, argument and restraint.

Ben-Gurion's alternative strategy was opportunist:

Israel should pursue her quest for security not through the UN or paper guarantees by the great powers but by exploiting shifts in the international balance.

One of his protégés, Shimon Peres, operated on the civilian front, constructing a secret and unofficial alliance with France; the other, Dayan, prepared for a lightning strike, the prime object of which was to free the Straits of Tiran. The result was the Sinai campaign.

Dayan was robbed of the full fruits of victory in 1956 by the Anglo-French intervention, which concealed the magnitude of his achievement.

Confident, then as always, of Israel's ability to go it alone, he had opposed collaboration with the French and still more with the British.

Ben-Gurion overruled him because he felt the RAF was needed to destroy the Egyptian air force; Dayan was prepared to risk the odd Egyptian bomber getting through.

The Sinai campaign seemed to justify his confidence, and he was understandably bitter when BG felt obliged to accept the U.S. dictat and withdraw behind the armistice lines. Dayan offered his resignation and was persuaded to postpone it for nine months only by BG's plea that it was vital that disagreements between the military and the politicians should be kept quiet.

At a Low Ebb

By May 1967 Israel's fortunes were at a low ebb. The politicians were divided, the economy was running down, Egyptian confidence was growing, and the Eshkol government seemed bent on peace at almost any price.

With a single stroke Nasser removed the one strategic advantage Israel had gained from her efforts in the Sinai campaign: the freedom of the Straits.

At the time Nasser's line of policy seemed brilliant; in retrospect it looked as though he had fallen into a trap.

The truth is that he, the Russians and practically everyone else, including many Israelis, underestimated the force of Israeli public opinion and its determination to risk war rather than suffer strangulation.

Once Nasser had reoccupied Sharm es-Sheikh, the popular clamour for Dayan's return — the symbol of a war policy — became irresistible, and on June the Mapai secretary voted, by 19 to 6, to make him Minister of Defence.

When the cabinet met the same day the issue of war had already been decided, and discussion centred on Dayan's proposals for waging it.

Thus Dayan was not the architect of the Six Day War, and it is a matter of dispute whether he had any real influence on its strategy.

We'll-informed Israelis, indeed, argue fiercely about Dayan's merits as a commander. But, as always in war, success is the thing that matters: Dayan wins battles.

'Coriolanus'

He is a proud man; he will not go through the normal motions of political self-advancement.

At heart he is a Coriolanus. If you ask him if he wants to be prime minister he says, bluntly, no: the life would not suit him.

On the other hand, if circumstances convinced him that it was his duty . . . He boasts that all the high offices of state he has held have been thrust upon him: 'I never asked for the job, they asked me.'

For a soldier he is a curiously indecisive man: for though he always speaks decisively at any one time, his underlying convictions — even on such vital subjects as Israel's frontiers and the future of the West Bank — seem to oscillate between a hard and a soft line.

It is as though he feels himself to be essentially an instrument of the Israeli consensus: the people must make up his mind for him.

This could be the right approach, for the Israelis will never tolerate a Man on Horseback or allow themselves to be led where they do not wish to go.

If tension relaxes, even if the present stalemate continues, it is hard to see him playing the supreme role.

But if the state is again imperilled, the summons to Coriolanus will almost certainly come.

The So-Called Sex Revolution Ringing Cash Register Bells

By BENJAMIN SMITH
(From an article in The Nation)

The Ladies' Home Journal abandons faithful Princess Grace and the Duchess of Windsor in favor of serializing Jacqueline Susann. Kenneth Tynan approves. Time profiles it. Broadway musicals extol it. Suburban housewives pant and lust for it.

And, since the United States is a consumer society that thrives on satisfying wants and desires, what is pop pornography if not the ingenious one-handed icing on the manufacturers' cake? In short, sex has become very big business indeed.

When our mass magazines, to name but a single source, tell us we are "liberated" and enjoying the "sexual revolution," why are some of us suspicious?

A large part of the answer is that this so-called "new permissiveness" has the ring of the cash register about it. It is a liberalization of sexual morality within prescribed institutional limits.

The kind of true sexual freedom that must evolve out of continuing social change, pace Fromm and Marcuse, is still light years away from any kind of reality.

What we are now observing is a commercial happening, like Father's Day or National Shoe Week. As a merchandising technique it has added untold points to the Dow Jones average. Sex sells.

So what is now taking place is an industrialization of our ideas and our dreams. In case you haven't been paying attention, your subconscious has become part of the Gross National Product.

To latch onto the head-over-pillow profits in sex and pop pornography — writers, have had to restructure the national psyche.

Tougher to remove than any household stain has been that bugaboo, the Puritan ethic.

In recent months, as you have no doubt read, it looks as though the big breakthrough has finally occurred — the orgasm has finally replaced the old rugged cross as the joyous symbol of what we are all about.

"The 60's," says Dr. William Masters (Human Sexual Response), "will be called the decade of orgasmic preoccupation."

Twenty years ago the white-collar class was already the willing victim of an exploitative society. The cheery suburban American way of life illustrated by Norman Rockwell, the strong happy-go-lucky Western families who settled a Big Valley or a Ponderosa, were all magazine or prime TV time mythology by 1950.

The absence of any order of belief "makes him (the average citizen) excellent material for synthetic moulding at the hands of popular culture — print, film, radio, and television," wrote C. Wright Mills in the early fifties.

So the sexual sphere becomes the new marketing mode; it is what consumers have in common with one another; it is the steady destruction of the ultimate human freedom in commercial bondage to the sexual.

The mentality of pop pornographers can be studied by examining the kind of movies they produce, the magazines they edit, the newspapers they print, the advertisements they write.

The really astonishing thing common to all such material is its generally sex-negative attitude. The mirror they hold up reflects a middle-class America in which there is a great deal of sexual misery.

Characteristically, the new sex vendors fail to provide the clues to understanding the national sex hang-up.

The profit side of the ledger is to be found in merchandising the debasing, dehumanizing, degrading aspects of sexuality; it is sexual adventurism rather than sexual love that is the true grit of this trade.

To latch onto the head-over-pillow profits in sex and pop pornography — writers,

You'll enjoy the view from the Panorama Roof.

Take a quick look from the window, because it's pretty out there, too.

Then turn your attention to serious things — things like delicate, flaky turkey, crisp salads, rich meats and subtle sauces. Lunch at the Panorama Roof is from the smorgasbord of smorgasbords.

If you don't like to be distracted by the view, consider the Timber Club.

It's warm and woodsy, spiced with the trunks of trees, and the menu is designed to please a sophisticated logger — robust but delicious. And then there's the Spanish Grill — light, airy and cool. The view here is of the prettiest girls in Vancouver. The West has many wonders; some natural, others man-made. The restaurants of Hotel Vancouver rank high among the man-made ones.

Sing-Out... All Day Long

It will be Sing-Out Day in Victoria Saturday, Sept. 20. Sing-Out Victoria—a group of 150 young men and women belonging to the international Up With People movement—will present a series of 20-minute spot shows.

Times and locations: 10 a.m., Centennial Square; 11 a.m., Bastion Square; 12:30 p.m., Hillside Shopping Centre; 1:30 p.m., Mayfair Mall; 3 p.m., Town and Country Shopping Centre.

Finally, at 8 p.m. in the McPherson Playhouse, the group will stage a two-hour performance of singing and dancing with 100 voice choir and instrumental ensemble.

"What we're aiming at is a new spirit for Victoria," says Larry Owens, who started Sing-Out Victoria two years ago.

"As part of the Up With People movement, we are dedicated to motivating people towards positive involvement in life."

"We're not a religious organization, but we do try to make life better for everyone," Owens said the Up With People movement started at an international youth conference at Mackinac Island, Michigan, when 1,200 students debated how they could become leaders of tomorrow.

"Since then more than 400 Sing-Out groups have been formed in countries all over the world."

The Victoria organization was formed after Sing-Out Portland came to Victoria in 1967 and put on a demonstration in Centennial Square.

City Artist Showing In Seattle

A Victoria artist will be represented at a three-week show at a Seattle art gallery.

J. George Jenkins, 959 Darwin, a resident since 1953, will be the only Canadian exhibitor in a three-man show at the Charles and Emma Frye Art Museum.

Jenkins paints in oils, and describes his style as "abstract realism" slightly like the style of renowned landscape artist Andrew Wyeth.

He has been a prize winner in several local art competitions, and several of his paintings are involved in the Greater Victoria Art Gallery's picture loan program.

His show at the Seattle gallery will be shared with Americans Malcolm Cameron, specializing in black and white drawings, and Charles B. Davis, a wood carver of Western scenes.

Jenkins said one of his greatest ambitions is to return to the Prairies where he was raised and paint to evoke memories of the depression he remembers from childhood.

The show will run from today to Sept. 25.

Missiles Sought

LUSAKA (Reuters) — The Sunday newspaper Zambia News says Zambia plans to buy a ground-to-air missile system from a British firm at a cost of nearly $15,000,000.

The accused asked the judge to release him on his own recognizance pending trial.

He had no money or property for bail, he said.

Sykes, formerly of Victoria, also told the judge that his life

Defamatory Libel Hearing Set

Pleading not guilty Saturday was in danger and this was why Oster refused to deal with the case.

"Don't you think then you will be safe in jail?" asked the judge.

He fixed bail at $750.

Sykes appeared before Judge William Oster Friday but Judge J. A. Byers remanded the accused until Sept. 24 for preliminary hearing.

Sykes is accused of writing four-page letters containing defamatory libel against Victor Williams and John Rennie, both of Victoria.

The accused asked the judge to release him on his own recognizance pending trial.

He had no money or property for bail, he said.

The Port Moody troop has made the 85-mile trip from Hope on the Fraser River for four years.

Oster said that the accused had sent a letter to the federal justice minister and the provincial attorney-general complaining about the manner in which he had dismissed an earlier Sykes case.

"He misunderstood my judgment and wrote to the justice minister and the attorney-general using language for which I would have held him in contempt of court had he employed it in this court," Judge Oster said.

The judge felt that in view of this he could not hear the case.

"I bear you no grudge in spite of your contemptible attack I can assure you, but I will have nothing to do with the case."

His wife had found herself in the throes of labor and called her doctor, who called the fire department, who rushed over and delivered the baby on his instructions.

"This was a quite a surprise," said Waldo.

Paper Firm Saved

By FRANK MURRAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mixture of bureaucratic blunders plus political pressure—on a loan to develop jobs in a poverty area has just cost United States taxpayers $2.3 million—the largest known loss ever on a federal loan to domestic private enterprise.

Little-noticed foreclosure proceedings this summer sealed the demise of Coastal Products Inc., which beginning in 1963 received a stream of government aid to build and operate a wood products factory in the piney forests of Florida's Panhandle. The factory has been purchased by a subsidiary of Canadian Abitibi for more than $2 million less than the government invested in the enterprise.

The sparkling new plant, at Blountstown, was to give permanent jobs to 150 residents of poverty-ridden Calhoun County. But it was in operation less than two years.

Why did the government end up losing money instead of providing jobs for the poor?

FIND MANY ANGLES

Extensive interviews and an examination of government and court records in Florida and Washington disclosed that:

• Representative Don Fuqua (Dem.—Fla.), who had a financial interest in the plant's success, actively pressed for government approval of the loan. He said he did so because of constituents who had invested in the operation.

• As a condition for granting the original loan, the government demanded that Coastal Products give it, as collateral, liens on 2,800 acres of land the firm owned in Florida. Yet before the first loan dollar left Washington, the government released the liens. One parcel ended up with Coastal Products' board chairman, who quickly sold it for more than twice what he paid for it.

• Coastal Products had problems almost from its birth. It incurred a working capital squeeze, had difficulty finding trained people and bought expensive machinery later found to be inadequate. When the firm fell behind on its loan interest payments, the government responded by pouring in more money, hoping to rescue its initial investment.

• Senator Spessard L. Holland (Dem.—Fla.) helped swing this additional government backing for the firm. An aide said the senator acted at the behest of a Florida politician who was a director of Coastal Products.

Recently, in an attempt to recoup some of the $5.4 million which a Florida judge ruled Coastal Products owed the government, the commerce department's Economic Development Administration sold the plant to Abitibi Florida Corp., a new American subsidiary of Abitibi Paper.

HELD SECRET TALKS

The price reached in secret negotiations was $3 million with $20,000 down and 22 years to pay the balance at a favorable 3.25 per cent interest rate. Abitibi plans to reopen the factory next May.

The difference between the $6.4 million total investment and the $3.1 million sale price left the $2.3 million loss, which, according to a survey of loan-granting federal agencies, is the largest of its type on record.

Nonetheless, Stephen Dunn, commerce department official who negotiated the sale, said: "I think we did a damn good job of pulling the government out of a real mess."

Commerce department officials say losses in the eight-year-old economic development program have totalled about $15 million of the $242.7 million in business loans and guarantees. But they add that the program has brought an estimated 20,000 new jobs to economically depressed areas.

Before the EDA could sell the plant to Abitibi, it had to buy up a $1.4 million first mortgage held by Allis-Chalmers Corp., Milwaukee, Wis.

mon and preferred stock.

The funds have been shifting their investments towards stocks and away from bonds. In 1960, the amount in bonds was 77 per cent of total pension fund assets, while the amount in stocks then was 7.2 per cent.

There were 4,065 pension funds in existence last year, compared with 3,789 and 1967.

The report showed that 55 per cent of pension plan assets at the end of 1968 were invested in federal, provincial, municipal and other bonds, while 21.8 per cent was in Canadian and foreign company and preferred stock.

The funds have been shifting their investments towards stocks and away from bonds. In 1960, the amount in bonds was 77 per cent of total pension fund assets, while the amount in stocks then was 7.2 per cent.

There were 4,065 pension funds in existence last year, compared with 3,789 and 1967.

Short-Haul Plane De Haviland Plan

TORONTO (CP)—De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. said Friday it is considering plans to develop and produce a 48-passenger, four-engined plane to be used on short-haul trips of about 100 to 400 miles.

The plane, which would be aimed at the international markets if the company decides to go ahead, would be designed to take off and land on short runways.

The company estimates that it would cost about $75 million to put the plane into production. A final decision is expected early next year.

The advantage of being able to operate on short runways is that the plane would be able to pick up and leave passengers much closer to downtown areas of cities than airports handling jet planes.

TORY CHIEF CRITICIZES federal Indian policies in Edmonton interview at beginning of western tour. Conservative leader Robert Stanfield warns of a growing concern among Canadians about the approach of the Trudeau government to the problems of Indian people. (CP Wirephoto.)

Stanfield Hunting Ideas Amid Mud, Metis and Beef

LAC LA BICHE, Alta. (CP) — Metis people, sunny skies, barbecue beef, and mud were ingredients Sunday as Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield started an idea-hunting, meet-the-people tour of northern Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Relaxed and smiling, the 55-year-old Opposition leader talked individually with many of the 400 people attending an indoor picnic in the Lac La Biche community hall Sunday evening.

His welcome to the community of about 2,000 persons was quiet, in contrast with receptions given Prime Minister Trudeau during his recent forays into Western Canada.

Speaking briefly to the crowd, Mr. Stanfield said it was important that the leader of a national party travel across Canada.

"There is no substitute for seeing parts of the country and seeing their problems."

He arrived here following an afternoon visit to the small Metis community of Kikino, 30 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Wearing a light brown suit with a yellow shirt, Mr. Stanfield chatted with Metis women as he toured the Kikino Newstart facility which is operated with public funds.

Newstart provides basic education in reading and mathematics for native people, vocational skills for the men and homemaking education for the women.

Mr. Stanfield said the program appeared to be a "significant one" and he hoped it would be successful to "encourage the authorities."

In Edmonton, where his tour started early Sunday, Mr. Stanfield told a news conference there is a sense of growing concern among Canadians about the approach being used by the Trudeau government to the Indian problem.

He said Mr. Trudeau's recent statements give the impression that the Indians' treaty rights may be wiped out.

Indian people have placed great emphasis on their treaty rights and "I would not, as prime minister, want to start off by saying these have to go," Mr. Stanfield said.

"I believe they have to be respected."

The Conservative leader also criticized the federal government for its "apparent lack of interest in foreign affairs"—particularly the Nigeria-Biafran situation.

Today Mr. Stanfield visits Bonnyville, 120 miles northeast of Edmonton, and then travels by car to the Frog Lake Indian Reserve before moving to Lloydminster where he will speak at a public meeting in the evening.

Tory Thinkers' Meet Surpasses Grassroots

By STEWART MACLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — When the Liberal party eight years ago held a so-called Thinkers' Conference in Kingston, it became glorious grist for John Diefenbaker's mill.

"Eggheads," he chortled.

The assorted academics who appeared to dominate proceedings at that meeting—as they expounded their views on the future course of Canadian Liberalism—took their lumps from the Conservatives and, to a lesser degree, from the New Democratic Party.

"I want to hear from the people," said Mr. Diefenbaker at the time, scoffing at suggestions that his party might hold a similar thinkers' conference. Conservative policy was the responsibility of the parliamentary caucus, guided by resolutions and views from the party's annual meetings.

TURNS FULL CYCLE

But events have turned a full cycle. When the Progressive Conservative party holds a five-day policy conference in Niagara Falls next month it will go far beyond the traditional grassroots for its guidance. The academics will be out in force.

The chairman of the conference's policy advisory committee will be T. H. B. Symons, president of Trent University in Peterborough and when the discussion groups go to work, they will be faced with a barrage of papers and views from the academic community.

C. J. Maule, assistant professor of economics of Hamilton's McMaster University and Isahl Litvak of the university's commerce department, will prepare a major paper on "the American Impact." D. V. Smiley of the University of British Columbia will present a paper on "rationalism or reason: alternative approaches to constitutional review in Canada."

J. G. Parr, of the University of Windsor, will present a paper on science policy, and a paper on national resources and national policy will come from W. C. Winegard, president of the University of Guelph and Norman Pearson of the same university.

A housing paper will come from Michel Chevalier of the University of Montreal, and James M. Gillies of Toronto's York University.

AUTO PARTS DEALER ELECTED ALDERMAN

NORTH COWICHAN—Lars Fowler, Chemainus auto parts dealer, was elected alderman in a byelection Saturday. In polling 662 votes, Fowler defeated electrical contractor James Roome (603), insurance agent George Schmidt (132) and retired businessman William Bowles (133).

It was Fowler's first try for office. Roome and Bowles have both tried previously for election to the North Cowichan council.

A total of 1,411 persons voted out of an eligible 4,900. Fowler will complete the term begun by Daryl Mornes, whose firm, MacMillan Bloedel, transferred him to Vancouver. Mornes' term ends in December, 1970.

Penny May Leads City Track Sweep

PORT ALBERNI — Victoria Track Club, fired by a driving performance from 19-year-old Canadian hurdles champion Penny May, swept the Vancouver Island Track and Field championships here Sunday.

Mrs. May, silver medalist at the Canada Summer Games and gold medalist in the 100-metre hurdles at the Canadian track championship a week ago, won five events and ran with a winning relay team.

Victoria Track Club teams also captured trophies for the midget girls' 4x100 relay and the men's open 4x400-metre relay.

The midget girls squad of Dianne Longmore, Donna Hammond, Peggy Teagle and Jill Pelland recently set the Canadian record for its age class over the distance.

Middle distance specialist Dave Welcker led team mates Brad Yakubowich, Dan Ryan and Brian Thomas to victory in the 4x400.

The events are all included in the women's pentathlon—usually run separately.

Miss May sparked her squad to the women's team

CAROL MANN

Winning Has a Soothing Effect

VANCOUVER (CP) — Carol Mann can't dance, sleeps with a board under her mattress and keeps on winning those rich Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournaments in spite of a bad back.

"It was diagnosed as a degenerative disc in 1964," the six-foot, three-inch Miss Mann said Sunday after winning the women's Canadian Open and another $4,012.

"One of my doctors told me that spontaneous fusion usually occurs about age 30. If it does, it will correct itself. Otherwise, I'll have to leave the tour for a year to have the operation."

The attractive pro from Cincinnati brought her earnings to $39,561 with her victory Sunday, finishing with a seven-under-par 212, three shots better than Kathy Whitworth of Dallas, Tex., and Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., co-leaders with Miss Mann after 36 holes.

And she was the only player in the field of 62 pros and 15 amateurs to put together three sub-par rounds—70-70-72—over the par-73, 6,261-yard Shaughnessy golf course.

Miss Post and Miss Whitworth each won $2,776 for their four-under-par 215s and the money boosted the Canadian youngster into 17th place on the LPGA list.

Mickey Wright, the record-setter from Dallas, had the best round of the day—two tee markers on the 510-yard par-five 16th.

"That's the first tournament in two years I've used a driver," said Miss Post. "I just can't afford a three-wood any more. Being 10 or 15 yards short was hurting me and I couldn't keep falling behind."

Miss Post dropped a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th green, delighting a gallery of about 6,000, to pull into the second-place tie with Miss Whitworth. (See scores below.)

Trapp Places Fourth

HALIFAX — The 1969 professional golf season in Canada could easily be called the year of Bob Cox.

Cox, a 29-year-old professional from Richmond, added a fourth title to his winnings Sunday as he won the $5,000 Atlantic open golf tournament.

He fired a three-under-par 70 in the final round to defeat runner-up Lawrence (Butch) O'Hearn of Dartmouth, N.S., the leader following the second round of play.

Cox, who has already won the Alberta and Saskatchewan Opens and the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship, finished the three-day 54-hole event seven strokes under par at 212.

COURSE RECORD

O'Hearn set a competitive course record during the second round on Saturday, but faltered in the final round, taking a three-over-par 76 and finishing five strokes off the pace.

Phil Giroix of Montreal equalled Cox' three-under performance in the final round and squeezed into third place ahead of Victoria's Vaughan Trapp and Bill Eznicki of Cape Cod, Mass., both with 221.

The tournament completed the field for the Canadian tour championship which starts Friday at Royal Quebec. Amateur Nick Weslock of Ontario and 12 professionals will tee off in the event.

Cox won an automatic berth in the field with his first-place finishes in the Alberta, Saskatchewan and Atlantic Opens.

WAKEHAM IN

Bill Wakeham of Victoria was the only other pro getting an automatic berth by winning the British Columbia Open.

Weslock won the only amateur berth with a first-place finish in the Ontario Open.

The remaining 10 professional berths in the field were decided on a points system. Tom Norman of Gilford, Ont., was the top point-getter with 64.5 points while Trapp took second place with 62.46 points.

Others who will tee off are Gary Bowerman, Toronto (60), Phil Homenuik, Winnipeg (62.5), Wayne Vollmer, Vancouver (51.8); Alvin Thompson, Toronto, (49.5); Ken Fulton, Montreal, (48.35); Bob Paasiuk, Windsor, (47.5); Bob Green, Woodbridge, Ont., (47.5); Gary Slater, Bahamas, (46).

Sweden Working Hard To 'Revive' Lakes

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Man has always assumed the best things in life were free.

We know water, air and land are the most precious things we have—the very prerequisites for our existence ... but we use them as rags and re-captacles.

While we economize with other production factors, man power, raw materials, capital equipment, we wantonly waste our environmental capital. For the best things in life, it turns out, we will have to pay dearly.

The above words are not mine. They head an editorial in a recent issue of a Swedish (English-language) magazine titled Now. An edition that is devoted to full coverage of pollution there and to efforts being made to solve it.

Sweden, like other countries, is seriously studying its pollution problems. At the same time it is doing something about them.

There's a remarkable new "remote sensing" technique in use that gives information about water currents, marine organisms, pollution and various chemical and biological data which can later be confirmed by laboratory analysis.

The technique includes spectroscopic films with special camera and filter combinations. It employs aerial photography and photogrammetry, as well as airphoto interpretation, geophysics and thermal mapping.

It registers pollution conditions that exploit the reflective differences between water layers of various compositions.

The presence of algae can easily be seen in the pictures. The type and distribution of shore vegetation mapped out. And it can be ascertained to what extent it is or is not alive. Oil discharges are also revealed.

Magazine Now says that through this remarkable technique and thanks to differences in the reflection properties of water and pollution in various parts of the spectrum, both visible and invisible to the naked eye, the flow of the pollution can be localized.

Concentration and spread can also be mapped and the direction and flow registered.

Other products and ideas geared to fight pollution include a new method for industrial degreasing that requires no rinsing water and therefore does not lead to pollution of waste water by oils, fats and other impurities.

A method for sewage treatment is also being tested. It involves flocculation in an upflow filter that "is based on a principle that has been known ever since the 17th century for potable water production."

One condition that Sweden shares with other countries is the damage that has been done to lakes and rivers near population centres, in which raw sewage has been released.

Projects are under way to find workable methods to revive these "dead" lakes and rivers. At the same time, Sweden believes that while restoring the waters is vital, it is even more important to stop the pollution.

Here is where the National Nature Conservancy Office, born two years ago, takes over. Its spokesmen say that "in decade" and with the full co-operation of all communities, treatment plants for the "removal of nutrients" will be almost universal in Sweden.

This because of the "very high pressure of public opinion to construct plants with a high treatment degree."

As for industrial wastes, expanded powers to regulate them are gradually being given to the conservancy office.

In its 1969-70 budget there will be provision for money over a five-year period to subsidize installation of equipment to control pollution.

Efficiency of Spies Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under the cold-eyed glare of key congressmen, the sprawling United States intelligence establishment has orders to shape up.

Concerned members of the House of Representatives defence appropriations subcommittee went so far as to send their own investigators to make a report on management of the defence department's Defence Intelligence Agency.

There are Republicans and Democrats on the subcommittee who feel the intelligence community is so crowded with agents, analysts, scientists and the like that they are tripping over their own cloaks.

Rep. George H. Mahon, who, as chairman of both the full appropriations committee and the defence subcommittee, is one of the powers in the House, says: "They just have reams and reams and mountains of information that isn't all very valuable."

Estimates of the cost of U.S. intelligence operations—including the military agencies, the CIA, the National Security Agency and spy satellites—vary from about $5,000,000,000 a year to $10,000,000,000.

The congressmen who have questioned the efficiency and product of the space-age cloak-and-dagger system are looking to Defence Secretary Melvin Laird to straighten out the multi-billion-dollar intelligence community.

About intelligence activities insist they know only what they have read in the newspapers about the latest intelligence case to hit the headlines—the Green Beret, U.S. Army and CIA clash over the alleged slaying of a Vietnamese double agent. But a close observer says it has added fuel to concern.

The defence subcommittee last year sent a team of investigators to inspect the work of the Defence Intelligence Agency, the spy apparatus which catches most of the heat. Investigators are reported still looking over the DIA's, and some other defence agencies' communications and data processing operations.

Republican Power Play For Dirksen Post Seen

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — The death of Sen. Everett M. Dirksen is almost certain to produce a major intra-party struggle for his post as minority leader of the senate.

There was immediate private speculation Sunday among Republican senators that liberal-conservative division such as that which marked last January's leadership contest would be revived.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.), the minority whip who had begun to act as a temporary replacement for Mr. Dirksen last week, would probably be the choice of liberals and moderates if he chooses to run for the top post.

It was assumed by several party members in the senate that conservatives would rally behind either Sen. Gordon Allott (Colo.) or Sen. Roman L. Hruska (Neb.), with Allott generally considered the more popular.

Scott would normally be assumed to have an edge, because he has held the whip's job all year and has not noticeably alienated anyone of importance. But the position of minority leader has considerable symbolic importance in the senate and conservatives are expected to put up their own candidate. "Scott will have a battle for it," said one conservative party leader Sunday night.

Among those mentioned speculatively Sunday as candidates for whip were Sen. James B. Pearson (Kan.) and Robert Griffin (Mich.). A number of liberals and moderates had backed Pearson temporarily for the whip's post in the election last January, but he bowed out in favor of Scott, who beat Hruska 23 to 20.

The procedure for filling the positions of minority leader and of whip is a simple majority vote among all the 43 republicans assembled in what is called the Senate Republican Conference. It would meet on the call of its chairman, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Maine).

There was some speculation

Sunday night that the conference might not be called until after the close of this session, which would mean a prolonged period of jockeying for votes similar to that which preceded the election of Scott as whip last January. Scott's opponent then was Hruska.

PRESTIGE PLUM

One Republican senator in a leadership position said that the selection of a minority leader might hinge on the simultaneous choice of whip. There is considerable sentiment to split the top leadership giving one spot to a liberal, the other to a conservative, he said.

The position of minority leader does not automatically confer great influence on the man who holds it. Few votes are won or lost because of his actions. Dirksen was able to change the senate's course on several occasions — on at least two treaty confirmations and the 1964 civil rights bill — because he could sway a handful of middle-road senators when the contests were tight.

But the minority leadership has come to be a precious plume of prestige for the holder, who is daily asked for his opinions by the press and who pays regular visits to the White House. To some extent, he is able to represent the party's attitude on everyday political events.

IMAGE QUESTIONED

This year, Dirksen had come in for increasing criticism among younger, more liberal Republicans who believed that his consistently conservative positions, stated weekly in the special news conferences he held, gave the party a tradition-bound image.

There had been some talk of attempting to depose Dirksen after the 1970 senatorial elections. But unless there had been an unusually strong infusion of liberal Republicans he probably would have survived the threat.

The partisan balance in the senate is almost certain to remain the same once Dirksen's temporary successor is named. The successor will be appointed by Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, who is a Republican.

The was no indication Sunday who might be picked to replace Dirksen. In Illinois, however, some speculation had arisen since his illness that Ogilvie might wish to arrange to have himself take Dirksen's place. He could resign under an agreement by which Lt.-Gov. Paul Simon would appoint him to the senate. That would turn over the Governorship to Simon, who is a Democrat.

Another possibility rumored in Illinois was that Ogilvie might appoint Attorney General William J. Scott, a Republican, to the senate.

He Starred at History's Turning Points

By ROBERT C. JENSEN

WASHINGTON (W.P.) — Everett McKinley Dirksen, a lawmaker whose flamboyant theatrical style almost concealed the fact that he was one of the Senate's most skilled legislative leaders, died Sunday at Walter Reed Army Hospital. He was 72.

The Senate minority leader had undergone a three-hour operation last Tuesday for removal of a part of his right lung after discovery of a cancerous tumor.

He died Sunday at 1:52 p.m. (PDT), two hours after he suffered a cardiac and respiratory arrest.

The Illinois Republican has been in ill health for several years. He suffered from emphysema — a debilitating lung disease — a persistent heart ailment and stomach disorders. But he always seemed to shake off his ailments and maintain a rigorous daily schedule.

President Nixon called the senator's death the loss of "a great American — a legislator of matchless skills and a warm personal friend."

Former president Lyndon B. Johnson sent a private message of condolence to Mrs. Dirksen.

Sen. Dirksen's office said he would be buried in Pekin, Ill., his hometown.

Arrangements for the funeral were incomplete.

Senator Dirksen had been a heavy cigarette smoker for years. In recent months he tried to quit and stopped carrying cigarettes, but he continued to borrow them from others.

At the time of his death Dirksen was serving his tenth year as a Senate minority leader. During that time, in the words of Robert C. Albright, longtime Senate correspondent for the Washington Post, Senator Dirksen "was a newspaperman's politician."

"Part Pagliacci, part Hamlet, part ham, he could play any role in the political handbook, and did," Albright wrote. "To the surprise of nearly everyone, he starred near the end of his life at some of history's great turning points in the role he played best — that of statesman."

Senator Dirksen played a crucial role in the passage of the civil rights act of 1964 and the ratification of the nuclear test ban treaty in 1963.

Both issues depended on securing a two-thirds vote of the Senate — for closure to end the filibuster in the civil rights bill and for ratification of the treaty. On both issues Dirksen had the power to deliver or withhold the Republican votes needed for the two-thirds majority.

But despite powerful pressures from within his party, he delivered the votes.

Toward the close of the debate on the nuclear test ban treaty, Senator Dirksen wound up an emotional description of the atomic attack on Hiroshima in 1945 with these words:

"The whole bosom of God's earth was ruptured by a man-made contrivance that we call a nuclear weapon."

In the 17 years since then, he pointed out, nothing much had been done to prevent a far more devastating reoccurrence. He said the test ban treaty was the "first small step" toward doing that and he was prepared to make that step.

When the civil rights act was first proposed, Senator Dirksen opposed it and declared, "They are reskilling America and you won't like it."

But during the months of the Senate's longest filibuster he worked behind the scenes with then Senate majority whip Hubert H. Humphrey to fashion a bill that would gain the support of the Senate.

Just before closure was voted Senator Dirksen took a line from Victor Hugo and said, "Stronger than all the armies is the idea whose time has come."

And then he told a hushed chamber: "The time has come for equality in sharing in government and education, and in employment. It will not be stayed or denied. It is here."

But despite his constructive roles in historic events, it was difficult to take Senator Dirksen seriously.

Reporter Albright wrote that the senator "so adored the clown's cap and bells. He liked nothing better than to break into a sedate Senate discussion with a funny story, often at his own expense. His rhapsodic flights in fulsome praise of the marigold, which he wanted to make the national flower, are now part of Senate lore."

Senator Dirksen, unlike so many of his colleagues, did not lean on the carefully prepared speech text. Even on the most important occasions, he relied only on notes he had scribbled to organize his thoughts.

He drew on his vast knowledge of the Bible, Shakespeare and world literature — and on a voice that could be played like a cathedral organ.

He could draw out the stops and declaim like a thundering prophet. And in the next breath his voice could drop to the softest whisper and he would let his audience hang on every word.

Detractors and even some of his admirers liked to refer to the Dirksen forensic ability in such derisive terms as "Old Honey Tonsils," "The Wizard of Ooze," "His tonsils are marinated in Honey" and "Oleaginous Ev."

All this tended to overshadow his ability as a legislative leader. In many ways, Senator Dirksen was the Republican counterpart to Lyndon B. Johnson when he was the Senate majority leader. Like Johnson, Senator Dirksen had a genius for accommodating the conflicting political pressures, for finding the key to agreement, compromise, or Johnson's favorite term, consensus.

Like Johnson, Senator Dirksen also understood the political motives and the personal strengths and weaknesses of individual senators and how to use this knowledge to achieve his goal.

He and Johnson had a warm, close personal relationship that extended back to their days in the House together during the 1930s and the 1940s. When Johnson became president in 1963 Senator Dirksen was among the first of the Capitol leaders he called to the White House.

And as Senator Dirksen had with presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy in all the nation's major crises, he cooperated closely with the president — or the commander-in-chief, as he usually referred to him when talking to reporters.

Senator Dirksen's political craftsmanship and his bipartisan approach to national security matters was admired by President Johnson and Johnson's mentor, the late speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Rayburn once said of Senator Dirksen: "If we must have Republicans in the house, let's have men like Everett Dirksen."

But in recent months, much of the Dirksen magic seemed to be failing him as he worked with a president of his own party and new Republicans in the Senate who were not awed by the Dirksen reputation.

Senator Dirksen provoked a maddening power struggle within the Nixon administration when he publicly fought the proposed nomination of Dr. John Knowles of Massachusetts to be an assistant secretary of health, education and welfare. The senator, who always has worked closely with the American Medical Association, joined the AMA in opposing the move and President Nixon was forced to name another man.

Liberal Republican senators also believed that Senator Dirksen had embarrassed the GOP on the issue of civil rights by threatening to press for the dismissal of Clifford L. Alexander, a holdover Democratic Negro appointee to the equal employment opportunity commission. In this case Senator Dirksen, who has always been pro-business, was reflecting the views of many employers who felt Alexander was pushing too hard for more job opportunities for Negroes and was dictating hiring policies to corporations.

Other Republicans also were embarrassed by Senator Dirksen's vigorous efforts to have Otto Otepka, the deposed state department security officer, appointed to a well-paying sinecure in the subversive activities control board.

By mid-year the grumbling by younger colleagues in the Republican cloakroom had grown louder and there was talk of trying to replace Senator Dirksen as GOP leader after the 1970 elections.

But changing positions and changing fortunes were nothing new to Senator Dirksen.

The Chicago Sun Times once reported that in his 16 years in the house he changed his mind 62 times on foreign policy matters, 31 times on military affairs and 70 times on agriculture.

Much the same could be said about his choices for the Republican presidential nomination. In 1940 he backed the late Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio. In 1944 and 1948 he worked for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. But in 1948 he was again in the Taft camp and opposing Dewey's choice of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

His denunciation of Dewey at the 1952 Republican national convention has become a legend in political story.

The 1952 convention was the first national convention that was given national television coverage and during the debate over seating rival Taft and Eisenhower delegations, Senator Dirksen was at the podium. He pointed his finger directly at Dewey, who was seated with the New York delegation, and said:

"We followed you before," and he paused dramatically before continuing, "and you took us down the road to defeat."

The reaction from the floor was fierce. The Eisenhower partisans booted. The Taft partisans cheered.

At the podium, Senator Dirksen looked surprised. He paused and with his usual dramatic flair, sipped from a glass of water. Then he said: "I did not mean to precipitate a controversy."

In 1961, Senator Dirksen and then House minority leader at that time Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, held a series of weekly news conferences to the boys worked on the small family farm and peddled produce while going through high school. Later the senator sold newspaper want ads in Minneapolis and peddled patent medicine door-to-door in South Dakota to help pay his way at the University of Minnesota Law School.

He left college to join the army during the First World War, saw combat in France with an artillery unit, and won a field commission.

After the war he returned to Pekin and for a time worked with his brother in running a bakery. He also wrote a number of plays, five novels and many short stories, all of which were unpublished.

However some of his plays were produced by Pekin theatrical groups, where he met his wife, Luella Carver. They were married on Christmas Eve in 1927.

They have a daughter, Joy, who is married to Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., a Republican from Tennessee.

The sessions, which were filmed for television, came to be known as the "Ev and Charlie Show," and drew the criticism of some liberal Republicans, who said the sessions gave the impression that the GOP was led by tired old men who believed in standing still.

Longshoremen to Seek Strike Vote Approval

THE ANGRY, THE AGING CHARLOTTE'S TOPIC

Dr. Charlotte Whitton, five times mayor of Ottawa and now an alderman, will address a meeting of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria in the Red Lion Inn, Monday, October 20, at noon.

Her subject will be "The Angry, The Anxious and The Aging".

NDP leader T. C. Douglas will speak on "Canada: United and Independent", at a Canadian Club meeting in the Red Lion Motor Inn Monday, September 22, at noon.

RCPM Supt. D. G. Fraser, of Ottawa, will address a meeting of the Canadian Club in the Empress Hotel, Wednesday, November 19, at noon. His subject will be "Organized Crime in Canada".

Vancouver Island locals of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union will meet tonight to seek approval for a strike vote, tentatively set for Thursday and Friday.

Mainland longshoremen will meet Wednesday to seek approval on the vote.

The 3,200 longshoremen have been working without a contract since July 31 and have rejected a conciliation board recommendation for a 70-cent hourly wage increase over two years on the current rate of $3.88.

The strike vote is designed to strengthen the union's hand in negotiations with employers.

Elsewhere, negotiations continued to make little progress among 1,300 boatmen officers and 700 workers and 30 companies.

The cable station, abandoned in 1959, is situated at the end of a 7,000-mile communications cable to Australia. The cable was laid in 1902, and the station once had a staff of 45.

The Bamfield station was built in 1902 as the North American link on a 7,000-mile cable to Australia designed to provide secret communication between Commonwealth countries.

The station's main building provided accommodation for a staff of 20 operators. By the mid-1950s staff had increased to 45.

In 1959, however, the station was abandoned and operated by remote control from Port Alberni. In 1962 the original telegraph cable was replaced by a newer cable capable of transmitting telephone messages to Australia, New Zealand and Asia.

When the station became obsolete it was taken over and put up for sale by Canadian Overseas Telecommunications, a crown corporation.

During the North Africa campaign of the Second World War a high percentage of messages went through Bamfield in scrambled form from Africa en route to the London War Office.

Bamfield's harbor was closely guarded during both world wars. Anti-submarine guns covered the harbor entrance, which the station overlooks, and an infantry detachment stood 24-hour watch over the installation.

LINELINES WERE LONG this morning at the University of Victoria gymnasium, as 5,000 students began to register for the university's winter term. Registration continues through Thursday.

Wrecking-Spree Hits Low-Rental Project

Vandals struck at the new Rose-Blanshard housing project over the weekend wrecking windows and light fixtures could we can to get them ready for occupancy on time."

Bowers said the weekend events were not entirely unexpected.

"We are running on an extremely tight delivery schedule," Bowers said. "All suppliers in the area are extremely busy at this time of year, but, because of the nature of this particular project, are giving us tremendous service."

"SENSELESS"

"The problem arises when we get a senseless wave of vandalism like this with key components wrecked or heavily damaged. That means a complete re-order from the supplier and sometimes a delay of weeks before he can fill that order."

Night patrols of the area have already been stepped up in anticipation of a "follow the leader" wave of vandalism.

Bill Hooson, assistant to the city manager of Victoria, asked private citizens to play their part in keeping the housing project on schedule.

"Even with 14 patrols a night there are obviously gaps over a 24-hour period," Hooson said. "If any citizen passing the project spots anything untoward going on I would urge them to call the police immediately."

"It isn't just a matter of protecting the contractor. These houses are desperately needed and we must all do everything

Q. What exactly is a Canada Council Medal? What is it awarded for?

A. Created in 1961, a Canada Council Medal honors a career rather than a particular work in the arts, humanities or social sciences. It is accompanied by a tax-free $2,500.

Twenty-nine have been awarded including one to Mungo Martin, chief of the Kwakiutl on Vancouver Island, for his recording of Indian songs and legends. He died in 1962.

HEART-VIEWING SCOPE DONATED TO HOSPITAL

St. Joseph's Hospital was $1,000 richer after a Gyro Club luncheon at the hospital today.

The money, which will be used to buy a cardioscope for the operating room, was presented by Gyro President Bruce Humber.

"We raised the money throughout the year on various programs," said Humber.

He said the club has made similar donations to other hospitals in the past.

Doctors R. J. Forth and H. H. Macartney, both of St. Joseph's, thanked the 50 club members present, and spoke briefly on the use of the cardioscope.

A cardioscope is an instrument for examining the interior of the heart.

'Set Example' The United Way

The United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal is getting too big for a haphazard approach, canvassers for the federal civil service portion of the campaign were told today.

Appeal Chairman Peter Darling said the campaign will soon be trying to raise $1 million every year, and that this requires organization.

He told the meeting of about 200 canvassers they must be salesmen for the appeal.

Hugh Cameron, chairman of the campaign's federal service division, said every person in the service must be approached.

You can't wait for them to come to you."

The objective of the federal service, he said, is to reach the quota and to encourage wage deductions. That would amount to 25 cents per pay cheque or "a bottle of beer every two weeks."

This year their goal is $52,000. In last year's appeal, federal civil servants raised $48,445 towards a goal of $50,000. The goal this year for the appeal's 24 member agencies is $694,000, up from $650,000 last year when the amount fell $35,000 short.

Commodore R. V. Henning of CFB Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard, said the United Appeal is one way federal employees who move from place to place, can contribute to their community. The commodore is vice-chairman of this year's appeal.

Through the appeal, he said, "we can meet our moral obligation to the rest of the community and set an example for others to follow."

across to canvassers in the federal service division of the United Appeal this year. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Nautical Reminder Holds Napkins Too

By PENNY SAVER

By the time the Mortons had finished their tales of going down to the sea in ships I was feeling slightly squeamish.

When they borrowed the slide projector and began flashing shots taken at great risk from a wet and wobbly deck, my squeamishness began to resolve into mal-de-mer.

By the time the lights flashed back on I was in the kitchen, grasping the coffee pot for dear life and swearing to stay a land-lubber to the end of my days.

When I returned to the living room, Mrs. Morton said: "Oh. We bought you this, Penny, as thanks for putting up with us while we visit your fair port."

Smiling weakly I accepted the gift in its sea-green wrapper and began to open it. "I hope you like it," she added as I opened the box.

"Charming," I replied, lifting out the small wood and metal model of a boat. "It shall stay on the mantelpiece forever."

"No, no. The kitchen table. That's a napkin holder, Penny dear. We knew you would prefer something practical."

Now that the Mortons are gone and my sea-sickness with them; I must say that the napkin holder is indeed attractive.

The wooden hull, with eyes for portholes, sits on a small metal stand that is curved to look a bit like waves.

A tall metal mast is surrounded by a V-shaped railing and the napkins, folded triangularly, are slipped around the mast and inside this railing to form a colorful sail.

Mrs. Morton found this nautical napkin holder in a

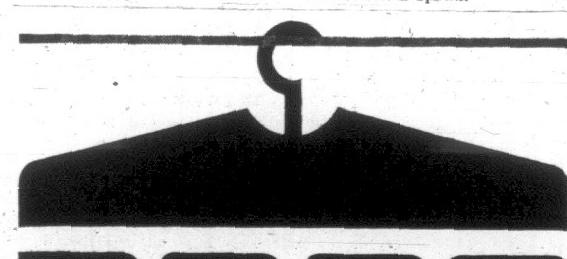

London Visit First Prize

LONDON (CP) — Skill with needle and scissors has brought an attractive Winnipeg teen-ager to a rendezvous with the Queen's dressmaker, Norman Hartnell.

Jan Stewart, a slender, self-possessed brunette of 18, arrived in London Friday for a week's visit, first prize in a nationwide teen-age sewing contest organized by a department store chain and a dress-pattern company.

Jan, an architect's daughter who has been sewing since she was 12 and makes all her own clothes, flew into London wearing one of her prize-winning outfits—a navy-blue corded cotton coat and skirt with a tailored blouse in pink, green white.

Accompanied by her mother, she was whirled off later to a fashion show at Hartnell's Mayfair salon, followed by a meeting with the master couturier. During her stay, she will also meet Clive, one of London's best-known young designers.

DEAR ABBY . . .

More on Sex Classes

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We were surprised and disappointed to learn that you approve of sex education in the schools. When did you change your mind?

Not too long ago you told a couple of high school students who wanted to study a marriage manual together, "You don't need to study the violin two years before you're able to practice."

Isn't that what sex education in school is? —Mr. and Mrs. B.

DEAR MR. AND MRS. B.: No! Sex education in the schools deals with animal and human reproduction, personal hygiene, health, including the seriousness of venereal disease, etc. Marriage manuals deal with the physical side of marriage, giving explicit instruction in sexual behavior. This, I agree, has no place in our schools, and is not taught there, contrary to what you may have been led to believe!

DEAR ABBY: How can an intelligent woman like you be for sex education in the schools?

Why, I heard that one teacher got so carried away while conducting a sex education lecture that she completely disrobed in front of the class!

In another school, the teacher herded the whole class into a dark closet and told them to feel each other!

I could tell you much more, but you wouldn't believe it. —Horrorified in Melrose, Fla.

DEAR HORRIFIED: I'm sure I wouldn't. And I don't believe the above incidents ever happened either. I have heard all these wild tales (and more) but have been unable to locate the teachers who supposedly did the above, the schools in which these incidents were supposed to have occurred, or any of the children who were actually present.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your sensible statement concerning sex education. From my observation, I must conclude that those who equate sex education with smut—and even Communism—are the ones who insist that this subject be left in the hands of parents.

On the other hand, I have a friend who is a physician, clearly qualified to handle the subject of sex. Yet, when the time came to tell his own son the facts of life, he was so embarrassed that the son was completely mystified by it all and failed to grasp the content of his father's message.

The boy later learned about sex in the traditional alloy, as do some 80 per cent of our youngsters.

education in schools is okay. During school years children should concentrate on reading, writing and arithmetic. And in their spare time they should think about dolls, flying kites, and baseball.

I heard that a school in southern California tried sex education 10 years ago and they had to stop it because over half the girls in the senior class dropped out because they were pregnant. —Against Sex Education.

DEAR AGAINST: Can you provide me with the name of that high school in southern California—and proof that over half the girls in the senior class dropped out because they were pregnant? If so, I will publicly apologize.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Maxi Answer to Mini Complaint

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)

"My supervisors seem to think my clothes are upsetting everybody in the post office," said Mrs. Shirley Mayberry, a 31-year-old divorcee.

Mrs. Mayberry and a co-worker, Mrs. Alma England, were sent home Thursday with instructions to lower their hemlines or not come back to work.

Mrs. Mayberry returned in slacks. Mrs. England returned in a dress several inches below her knees.

Both claimed the mini-skirts they had worn originally were stylish, not indecent.

Postmaster Lewis E. Moore said the two had violated dress rules drawn up by an employees' committee.

Engineers' Meet

VANCOUVER (CP)

About 400 professional engineers and their wives will attend the 83rd annual meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada here Sept. 9 to 12. Theme of the convention will be "Energy, Springboard of Man's Progress."

One rule requires that the hem of a skirt must be no more than four inches above the bend of the knee. Another declares that slacks should not fit so tightly they show the outline of undergarments.

The Nashville Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees charged the rules committee is a "rubber stamp" not representative of the employees.

"As long as a form of dress is not declared indecent by our society, we don't see why employees should have to buy something special to work in," a spokesman said.

PLUMS HIT NEW LOW, BUT . . .

Mini-Market Trading Brisk

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

No money is exchanged at weekend sessions of the Egg, Vegetable and Book Barter Society. But the transactions can be as complicated as international trade agreements, especially when the have-not members of the free trade area are forced to resort to manufactured products, such as plum jelly, to make up for a shortage of natural resources.

In the beginning, the arrangement was simple. A neighbor brought me some tomatoes in exchange for eggs.

The system was manageable even when I shared the tomatoes with my sister and she gave me some apples, which I shared with our neighbor.

Then things progressed to the point where my sister's baby sitter, who needed extra eggs for her customers, paid with home-made bread, some of which my sister gave to me in exchange for beans from a neighbor to whom I gave some plums.

An interesting variation of the game is known as the stock exchange; stewing hens for a pot roast, mutton for moose.

The arrangement works well at this level, but

Child Labor Introduced

Another essentially non-negotiable product is the cracked egg. However, several of these manufactured into a large chiffon cake become useful in high level negotiations.

Recently, service for goods has also been introduced on a trial basis.

A colleague of my sister sent her 11-year-old son out from Oak Bay to clean out the barn. In exchange for supplying this free child labor she received my sister's surplus rhubarb.

But this is beyond the scope of the original agreement which is based on the most primitive trading principles: a tomato for an apple and an egg for an ear of corn.

The only permanent exception to this is my role as minister of transport.

With a car loaded with frozen beans, frozen raspberries, frozen mutton, plus tomatoes, eggs, plums, apples,

Ana Maria Gonzales, the Guatemalan beauty who currently bears the title of Senorita Chiquita, recommends combining bananas with seasonable fruits to make an attractive and delicious fruit salad platter. For a dressing she uses banana mayonnaise. During her brief visit to Victoria she discussed some of her favorite banana recipes.

Chiquita Stores Bananas in Fridge

Senorita Chiquita (alias Ana Maria Gonzalez of Guatemala) visited Victoria Friday, bringing with her a generous bunch of banana recipes.

Ana Maria is a 22-year-old marketing student who has worked as an airline stewardess and television host in Guatemala and toured Latin America as a member of the Guatemala National Modern and Folk Dance Company.

She arrived here in a bright yellow banana dress, carrying a banana shaped cape across her arm.

It is one of five special costumes in a banana theme designed by Alfred Fiadaca of Boston for Ana Maria's six month tour of Canada and the United States.

Her mission is to promote bananas, and to tell people that despite what was previously believed, bananas can be stored in the refrigerator once they have reached their desired ripeness.

Here are some of Ana Maria's favorite banana recipes:

ANA MARIA'S FRUIT ANTIPASTO

Line a large platter with a bed of iceberg lettuce. Quarter bananas or slice in large diagonal chunks. Alternate rows of bananas with whichever of these fruits is in plentiful supply: slices of cantaloupe and nectarine, triangles of watermelon, and a large mound of cottage cheese decorated with apple wedges, the red peel left on for color accent, and Bing cherries. Top individual servings with Banana Mayonnaise.

BANANA MAYONNAISE

One ripe banana, 1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lime or lemon juice, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup mayonnaise.

Mash the ripe banana and add juice. Blend in mayonnaise. Cover and chill in refrigerator. Makes one cup.

FRIED BANANA CHIPS

Sauté oil or melted shortening to depth of $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in skillet; firm bananas (the greener the better), salt.

Heat oil to 375 degrees over medium heat. Peel bananas and slice into thin rounds. Fry until golden brown, turning once. Drain well on paper towels and sprinkle with salt. Serve hot or cold.

There's a suite in a Nassau hotel waiting for five days.

While there, Toronto industrialist E. P. Taylor will be host for a day for golf and lunch.

There are also two first-class tickets to Rome for a five-night hotel stay for free. The Canadian embassy has arranged for an audience with the two with the Pope.

And the list goes on and on — from a ride in a balloon over Toronto, to a five-day stay in Tahiti to three days in Montreal or five days in Mexico City.

Another Toronto couple is donating a winter house in the West Indies for two weeks, with the services of a cook and gardener. Others are offering residences in Jamaica or New Brunswick.

Cook like regular pancakes.

Ana Maria suggests serving with honey.

Going-Going-Places Auction Will Help Restore Old House

Going-Going is part of a

People are interested or generous enough for donating this and that to make go of it.

Pianist's Wife Still 'So Content'

NEW YORK (AP) — When Mrs. Artur Rubinstein talks about her husband, whether she is happy or pensive, she talks of love.

"We share so much, we have this communion," she says of her life with the world-famous pianist.

"If I'm not there in the concert hall with him, it's a waste. He has to have me so that he can say afterwards, 'Look, see how I did.'

"He knows that when I'm in the hall I listen 250 per cent," she explains.

Her china-doll skin, etched only slightly by the years and framed by her wavy ash-blond hair, belies her 60 years. Rubinstein is 80.

"We are married for 27 years and I am so content," she says in her still-thick Polish accent.

The Polish-born musician has been performing for audiences around the world since adolescence.

Rubinstein met his wife, the former Amelia Mlynarski, in Poland in 1926. She was the daughter of a conductor.

Today, she offers some insight into what it means to be married to an artist.

"You have to be more sensitive, more understanding, less egocentric than some women are," Mrs. Rubinstein advises.

"Artists, even though they are famous, are very vulnerable. There's a little bit of the child in them."

With their two sons and two daughters grown up, she travels extensively with Rubinstein.

"We are married for 27 years and I am so content," she says in her still-thick Polish accent.

The Polish-born musician has been performing for audi-

"Everywhere we go, I feel at home."

Svetlana Deplores Violence

NEW YORK (AP) — Svetlana Alliluyeva, daughter of the last Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin, says she disapproves of student violence and thinks it is "absolutely shocking."

In an article in an issue of Look magazine, Svetlana, who came to the United States 2½ years ago and now lives in Princeton, N.J., said of the students:

"The moment they begin to use violence, I cannot take it. Violence in any form against teachers is absolutely shocking and this physically dirty look isn't necessary either. You can protest without it . . . Compared to the world I come from I think they (the students) have a wonderful life."

She said she could understand student dissent over the Vietnam war, but added: "I am absolutely fed up to hear about their revolution and Mao and those things."

Svetlana said that despite the fact she left her two children in Russia she could not go back.

TO SOME, A HERETIC . . .

VICTORIA DAILY TIMES, MON., SEPT. 8, 1968-25

TO OTHERS, A THINKER

He Questioned Christianity's Most Cherished Tenets

JERUSALEM (AP) — Rev. James A. Pike, former Episcopal (Anglican) bishop, was a doubter of Christianity's cherished tenets and believer in man's ability to communicate with the dead. He died in quest of what he viewed as theological truths.

To some, the wiry, restless churchman was a heretic because he assaulted the granite of Christianity.

PIKE body found

Pike's Search For Meanings Ends in Death

JERUSALEM (AP) — Rev. James A. Pike, who lost his battle with the Judean desert which he had hoped would yield a fuller meaning of Christianity for him, "did not fear death and now he is at peace."

The words came from his 31-year-old third wife Diane after the body of the former Episcopalian (Anglican) bishop of California was recovered from a ledge of a deep canyon Sunday. The spot was two miles from where she had left him to go for aid last Monday night.

"There was no more appropriate place for Jim to die, if he had to die," said Mrs. Pike. She told reporters her 56-year-old husband remarked before they set out on the trip: "If I die here, I will be happy and at peace."

The Pikes came to the Holy Land to do research for a book on the life of Christ.

"And now Jim has died in the place where Jesus found consolation," she said. "The book must be finished. My brother and I will do it. It will be a memorial to Jim."

SEARCHED WASTELAND

Search parties of Israeli police, Bedouin trackers and army volunteers spent six days combing the wasteland where the Dead Sea Scrolls were found 20 years ago.

Police Inspector Salomon Abu Yaman said Pike apparently was trying to climb out of the canyon and fell about 80 feet to the ledge.

An Israeli pathologist said Pike apparently died almost immediately from the fall and had been dead two to five days.

Last Saturday, Pike's undershorts were found not far from where the couple abandoned their car Monday when it became stuck in a dirt track about five miles from the Dead Sea.

Mrs. Pike went on for help after her husband collapsed, and found a camp of road workers after walking all night.

To others, he was one of the world's great thinkers, a seeker of truth, a warm rumpled gentleman without a trace of guile. Pike was bishop of California — actually a 230-mile long section from San Francisco south — for eight years. In 1966, he decided it was time to give up the post.

In the summer of 1965, Pike had found himself on a pulpit at a church camp before all the pastors of his diocese. He denounced hypocrites, sinners and blasphemers who went to church on Sunday and ignored God the rest of the week.

Then he questioned the Virgin birth and the Resurrection.

PLANNED MORE BOOKS

Pike wrote at least a dozen books and was planning three more. In one, Time of Christian Candor, Pike assaulted the Adam and Eve theory of the beginning of man. He called the story "absurd and incredible," saying only a cruel God would punish two human beings for eating an apple.

"As to such a 'God' who could so behave, a person reasonably intelligent and ethically sensitive would be forced to be an atheist," he wrote.

The Father, Son and Holy Ghost concept of the Trinity, he said, is "outdated, incomprehensible and non-essential."

Of the Virgin birth, he said: "I don't see anything special about the birth of Christ. He was a man whose openness was such that in Him God broke through totally."

Pike's enemies were the conservatives of the church and the laity.

BORN A CATHOLIC

Pike was born a Roman Catholic in Oklahoma City, Okla. His father, James, died when Pike was a child. The family moved to Southern California and the boy attended Hollywood high school.

After graduation, he gave up a chance to go to Harvard on a scholarship, choosing instead to study with Jesuits in what was then a small college—University of Santa Clara—because "I understood they would know the most about the faith I had begun to question."

In the years that followed, Pike found it more difficult to accept the Roman Catholic position on birth control and the concept of papal infallibility.

In 1932, after only two years, he left Santa Clara, having found that he had "very quickly" lost his Christian faith and become an agnostic who neither rejected nor accepted religion.

He was graduated from the University of Southern California with degrees in arts and law.

and then earned a doctor of law degree at Yale. He became a lawyer for the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission after being admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court.

SOUGHT A MEANING

Association with Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal infused Pike with the need to "seek the meaning for my life in a career and a seal for social reform," he once said.

But he wasn't satisfied. He rediscovered Christianity as "the most plausible perspective on reality."

There is no information on Pike's first wife—he never spoke of her and left her out of all his biographies. Even close friends never learned her name or the dates of the marriage and its annulment.

In 1942, "Pike" was married again—to Ester Yanovsky, a former student of his at George Washington University. He soon decided to return to the ministry.

The Second World War intervened, but Pike was in a hurry. While serving as a naval intelligence officer on the secret dispatch desk, he was admitted as a postulant in the Washington Episcopal diocese.

Later he was elevated to the priesthood and in 1952 became dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York.

He was named Bishop of California in 1958, and remained a headline figure until the end of his life.

TOOK NEW ROLE

Pike stepped down as bishop of California in 1966 to take up a new role as theologian-in-residence of the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara.

This was the year that Pike's son shot himself to death in a Manhattan hotel room. James A. Pike Jr., 22, had gone through torments trying to find himself, and failed.

Two years later, Pike touched off another storm when he took for his third wife the former Diane Kennedy in a Methodist ceremony. With her he wrote a book, The Other Side, in which he said he had communicated through a medium with his dead son.

In the years that followed, Pike found it more difficult to accept the Roman Catholic position on birth control and the concept of papal infallibility.

In 1952, after only two years, he left Santa Clara, having found that he had "very quickly" lost his Christian faith and become an agnostic who neither rejected nor accepted religion.

He was graduated from the University of Southern California with degrees in arts and law.

Will Success Spoil Hawaii's Don Ho?

By BOB THOMAS

HONOLULU (AP)—To the rest of the continent, Don Ho seems to be the symbol of the new Hawaii—fresh, alive, up-to-date, loaded with island charm. To the islanders, he is something else again.

Perhaps it was only natural. Ho was the hometown boy who made good, and a few years ago he might have been elected mayor of Honolulu in a landslide. Not now.

The mainland also has discovered the sleepy-eyed entertainer, and now he stars in television specials, in big-city concerts and in the casinos of Las Vegas. He is no longer Hawaii's own. Also, he has been the target of bad publicity over reports that he had trouble with some of his shows, used "blue" material before family audiences and battled with his management.

There is no evidence of any lack of popularity at Duke Kahanamoku's nightclub, which is packed nightly. Prices are the steepest in Waikiki—$4.50 cover charge, $4.95-$8.95 for dinner, $1.75-$3 a drink. But long lines await each show. For his weekly labors, Ho is paid a reported $17,800.

Ho can be a crowd pleaser. He sings less than he did in his early career. "I'm not really a singer," he claims. But he does his hit numbers—"Pearly Shells, Tiny Bubbles, Born Free"—and brings

Montreal Fair Closes

MONTREAL (CP)—All but the amusement area of Montreal's Man and His World exhibition closed Sunday and predictions by city officials that the island fair will re-open next summer.

The fair's La Ronde amusement area will remain open on weekends until Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 13.

A spokesman for the mayor's office said Sunday that re-opening of the fair next year "can be taken for granted" although, officially, city council and the executive committee must make the decision and a budget must be prepared. Last week the Quebec government announced continued financial support for the fair in 1970, promising to subsidize 70 per cent of any deficit up to a ceiling of $5,500,000.

HOME GARDEN

Leading Role Played by Weather

By HILDA BEASTALL.

Continued attention to the midsummer vegetable sowings will produce worthwhile results. We can never be sure of the exact way these later sowings will act, for weather is still an unknown quantity. However, if we sowed into humusy soil, that is, with compost raked into the top few inches of soil and have not neglected the gentle watering demanded by seedlings, the vegetables should have made satisfying progress by this time.

Lettuce and beets can be thinned out a few at a time and used. Carrots will be more usable if thinned first to an inch apart and left to grow for subsequent thinning. Peas like the cooler weather. An early August sowing has pods formed now and plenty of flowers. These should have a small crop ready to pick before long, continuing into October.

The beans like warmer temperatures and are a gamble waiting to prove themselves.

One weak feeding of liquid alginure poured along the carrot, beet and bean rows after a watering will give them a boost.

In a particularly warm spot of the garden, still another sowing can be made now, but limit it to a few seeds of lettuce, radish and onion. Space about an inch apart to avoid need for root disturbance by thinning.

These are certainly worth a try. A piece of ship-lap set into the ground (or merely supported by small stakes on each side) on the north of the row will reflect warmth from the sun and hasten germination.

Any other device the gardener's ingenuity evolves can be used so long as it does not result in weakening the plants.

The best arrangement for this late sowing is the same as that which is so successful in early spring — the shallow coldframe with a fresh top dressing of compost added now.

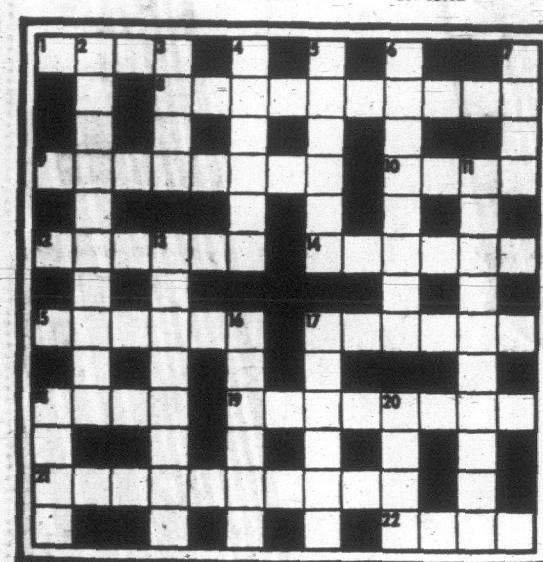

The frame provides a glass cover to go on when frost threatens or to keep out heavy rains, but also permits free circulation of air and full overhead light.

If you can put a frame together quickly, the time and labor will be repaid in a few weeks plus the prospect of having it ready for another sowing late next February before the outdoor soil is warmed and dry enough for sowing seeds.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Britain Won Canada When Montreal Fell

By BOB BOWMAN

There was no hope for Montreal after that. General Amherst mobilized three armies to attack the city from three different directions and they were welcomed by many of the habitants as they advanced. Montreal was surrounded on the evening of Sept. 6, and Governor Vaudreuil capitulated the following day.

Levis and Murray had great respect for each other although the siege of Quebec had been long and bloody. Murray arranged to have Levis returned to France with all possible honor.

Other events on Sept. 8:

1535 — Cartier reached Island of Orleans on second voyage.

1619 — Jens Munck expedition arrived at Churchill River, Hudson Bay.

1763 — King George III issued proclamation urging all French citizens to remain in Canada.

1786 — More than 500 Scottish immigrants from Loch Nevis arrived at Quebec after 70-day voyage.

1816 — Frontenac was first Canadian steamer launched on Lake Ontario.

1864 — Charlottetown conference ended.

1883 — Western wheat crops suffered severe blight.

1910 — Hague Tribunal defined U.S. fishing rights in Canadian waters.

(Copyright, 1968, Toronto Star Syndicate)

A few years later some British statesmen expressed somewhat similar views, and would have been happy to give Canada to the U.S. Canada was something like the man who said he was claimed by two cities: Sydney and Victoria. Sydney claimed he came from Victoria and Victoria claimed that he came from Sydney!

In the spring of 1760 General Levis made a gallant effort to recapture Quebec and defeated General Murray at the vicious battle of Sainte-Foy. However, Murray was able to withdraw his troops inside Quebec, hold on until the Royal Navy arrived, and Levis was forced to retreat.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

C. Douglas Dillon, the secretary of the treasury under both President John F. Kennedy and President Lyndon B. Johnson, is an ardent bridge fan. Although not in the expert class, Mr. Dillon is a good player.

In the deal presented today, he gave an excellent demonstration of his capability as a defensive player. He was in the West seat.

The bidding:

South: West: North: East:

1 ♠ 1 A 2 ♡ 2 ♣

3 ♦ 1 A 1 ♠ Pass

Pass: Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After his king of spades had won the opening lead, Mr. Dillon paused to consider what to play next. By looking at the dummy and his own hand, he quickly realized that South, for his vigorous bidding, rated to have both the ace and king of trumps, plus the king of clubs.

If such were the case, what did East have for his raise to two spades? In all probability, he had five spades — and, hopefully, the queen of diamonds. Thus, if a second spade were led, and East had five spades, declarer would ruff the lead, and have things his own way.

And so, acting on the assumption that South had no more spades, West led the deuce of diamonds at trick two. Declarer, correctly assuming that West, for his vulnerable overcall, had the diamond ace, put up the board's king. As is evident, the king won the trick, East playing the eight-spot.

The ace and king of trumps were then cashed, leaving West with the high queen. The king, ace and queen of clubs were played next, with the hope that West would follow suit to these three leads. Had this happened, South would have discarded a diamond on the fourth club. But Mr. Dillon ruffed the third club, after which he cashed the diamond ace, and then led another diamond. East's queen taking the setting trick.

Had Mr. Dillon led the spade ace at trick two — instead of a diamond — declarer would have ruffed. The defenders would then have made only one diamond trick — and declarer would have fulfilled his contract.

GOP SENATE HEAD, EX-BISHOP DIE

Two prominent Americans, Republican Everett Dirksen and former Episcopal Bishop James Pike, are dead.

GOP senate leader Dirksen died Sunday in Washington. His story is published on Pages 18 and 19 of the Times today.

Rev. Pike was buried today at St. Peter's Cemetery in a suburb of Tel Aviv, Israel. His body was found in the desert of the Holy Land on Sunday. His story is on Page 25.

U.S. Envoy Free

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — United States Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick said today his Brazilian kidnappers kept their faces masked at all times during the four days they held him captive. He described them as "intelligent fanatics".

"They were not the kind of people you would like to engage in an argument," he told a news conference less than a day after being freed in exchange for 15 Brazilian political prisoners. He was released after the prisoners were flown to Mexico by the Brazilian government.

The 61-year-old veteran diplomat said he had little inkling of his abductors' "ideological orientation," but added that they had nothing good to say about the Brazilian government.

In their ransom note, the kidnappers identified themselves as belonging to the National Liberation Action and the MR-8.

HIT ON HEAD

Elbrick was pistol-whipped on the head when he resisted getting in the kidnappers car last Thursday.

He said he was told about the reasons for the kidnapping "only in vague terms."

But if Elbrick's troubles were over, Brazil found itself faced with the threat of new strike and mounting violence by both left-wing and right-wing forces.

The urban guerrillas who staged the successful kidnapping vowed that they now would intensify their activities, "extending them to the country where we will awaken the enormous revolutionary potential of the rural workers."

Political observers here agree that the success of the rebels could provoke militant reactions from right-wing army officers opposing the conservative government.

SEIZE RADIO STATION

Saturday night a group of paratroopers seized the government radio station and broadcast an anti-government manifesto condemning the surrender to the guerrillas' demands.

Added to this is Brazil's recent history of right-wing violence, with police murder squads which have executed more than 1,000 petty criminals while Communist hunting squads have concentrated on leftists and liberals.

Elbrick, 61, was released Sunday night in the northern suburb of Tijuca and told not to move for 15 minutes. But he immediately

Saigon Accepts 'Tacit' Truce

SAIGON (Reuters) — The United States and South Vietnam today backed into a tacit three-day truce with the Viet Cong as the Communists launched the death of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

The U.S. military command reported only one serious clash with Viet Cong ground forces—an ambush in Quang Tin province in which two American infantrymen were killed and five were wounded.

Six guerrilla shelling attacks—none of them on U.S. bases or camps—were reported since the start at 1 a.m. (10 a.m. PDT) of a 72-hour ceasefire declared by the Communists Friday to mark the mourning period for the North Vietnamese leader.

A U.S. command spokesman said Vietnamese forces launched 50 offensive and defensive operations today. There were no reports of serious fighting.

Fifteen hours after the beginning of the Viet Cong truce, the U.S. and South Vietnamese commands issued a joint statement brushing aside the question of a ceasefire but declaring that military operations would be "influenced" by what the guerrillas did.

The U.S. spokesman refused to elaborate, or to deny that Southern allied troops were ordered to keep the ceasefire. Observers considered the statement a tacit way of acknowledging the Viet Cong ceasefire without formally honoring the memory of the veteran Communist leader who died Wednesday.

The Saigon government Sunday ruled out a truce in the memory of its enemy. The U.S. went along with the South Vietnamese decision.

The joint statement today also emphasized that a wide-ranging round of guerrilla attacks took place between the announcement of the truce Friday and the time it actually started.

The two Southern allied commands said: "The scale of our military operations in the past has been influenced by the scale of enemy operations. During this period the scope of our operations will likewise be influenced by the nature of enemy operations."

In 12 previous truce periods—all to work holidays—both sides said they fought only to defend themselves.

The big exception was the Communist offensive against South Vietnamese cities and towns at Tet in March, 1968. That followed a last-minute decision by the government to observe the truce only in part in the country.

An official at the office of President Nguyen Van Thieu said the statement should not be taken as meaning the government accepted a ceasefire in memory of Ho Chi Minh.

Wage Freeze Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — The national president of a 130,000-member union warned today that trade unions could not promise to hold the line on wages even if business agreed to restrain prices.

Stanley Little told the annual conference of his Canadian Union of Public Employees that talk of anti-inflationary programs urging voluntary wages and price restraint "made no sense."

"They didn't want to go to a hotel; they wanted to get away. There is nothing macabre or extraordinary about it in any way. It's very simple—they wanted privacy. I guess their wish to avoid publicity backfired on them."

In Calgary, a reporter of radio station CKXL went to the Sarcee marshalling yard to get a story for himself.

Dale O'Hara said that when he arrived at the yard he was talking to a CNR security official.

'Nothing Sinister' On Mystery Train

EDMONTON (CP) — Mystery continues to shroud a train which is making repeated runs between Calgary and Edmonton, but a CNR spokesman said Monday "there's nothing sinister about the dangle thing."

Donald Purves, vice-president of the mountain region, said in Vancouver:

"All it is is a group of businessmen; I don't know who or where from, who chartered the train to hold a series of meetings and hold the meetings away from the usual atmosphere when you hold these meetings."

"I called out to the guy on the train, 'what would happen if I just happened to wander over and try to climb aboard, would I get shot?'

"The guy said 'probably,' and he didn't smile when he said it."

Mr. O'Hara said one of his sources told him that "nobody gets off the train, dead or alive, until Wednesday—and they have a special compartment to keep the body in if anybody should die."

Mr. O'Hara said the train has 12 passenger cars, a dome car, baggage car, and cabs pulled by three diesel engines. It left Calgary, apparently empty, at about 2 p.m. Saturday. It stopped at Beiseker and Conrich, two hamlets north of Calgary, and arrived in Edmonton with about 60 persons on board.

Mr. O'Hara said his sources told him the train will shuttle between Calgary and Edmonton until Wednesday.

Arab Commandos hurled hand grenades at Israeli diplomatic and business offices within a 30-minute period in three capitals of Europe today, wounding four persons.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, whose commandos hijacked a TWA jetliner to Damascus 10 days ago, said they carried out the coordinated grenade attacks in Belgium, Holland and West Germany.

In Iraq, Baghdad Radio announced the execution of three Iraqi citizens for spying for Israel and the United States. None of those executed today were Jews. Their deaths raised to 54 the number of persons hanged or shot as spies in Iraq this year.

Israelis Sink Two PT Boats

Israeli naval commandos destroyed two Egyptian torpedo boats at their mooring on the Red Sea coast Sunday night, Israeli military authorities announced.

Three Israeli commandos were killed on the way home from the raid when explosives accidentally detonated in their boat, the announcement said.

The most serious of the grenade attacks was in Brussels. Two youths tossed grenades into the office of the El Al Airline, and the explosion wounded the manager and three other persons. Belgian police arrested the youths fleeing from the scene.

In The Hague, a grenade exploded on the doorstep of the residence of the Israeli Embassy's first secretary. Police said they arrested an Arab teen-ager who carried a second grenade believed intended for an open window of the embassy, next door to the residence.

Two hand grenades were thrown at the rear of the Israeli embassy in Bonn, shattering windows and spraying glass shards about the office. No one was injured.

Guerrilla Group Takes Action

In Beirut, Lebanon, a spokesman for the PFLP said the guerrilla group carried out the attacks. He said details would be released later.

The Bonn attack took place at 3:35 p.m. Victoria time and the other two at 4 a.m.

An Israeli military spokesman said the Egyptian boats were sunk at a naval base at Ras Sadaq, about 14 miles south of Suez City.

The spokesman said the Egyptian boats "had been used for acts of sabotage and the mining of the Israeli coasts."

Military sources said the Egyptian boats were Soviet-built P-183 craft, 75 feet long and 18 feet wide. He said they were capable of a speed of 38 knots and normally carry a crew of 20. They are equipped with two torpedoes and two double-barrelled 25-millimetre guns.

The governments represented at the meeting were Saudi Arabia, Morocco, Iran, Pakistan, Malaysia, Somalia and the Niger Republic.

Egypt, meanwhile, demanded the United States today for starting delivery of 50 Phantom jets purchased by Israel.

"This action was directed against the safety and security of Arab people," a foreign ministry spokesman said in Cairo.

Lebanon Tackles Guerrilla Issue

BEIRUT (Reuters) — The delicate, dominating issue of Lebanon politics—the country's attitude to the Arab commandos who are virtually a law unto themselves in some areas, and whose commando raids against Israel brought ground and air strike retaliation from the Jewish state Saturday.

Lebanon, half Christian and half Moslem, was long the least aggressive of Israel's Arab neighbors. But its growing use as a guerrilla base since 1967 has brought tension along the ceasefire line. Government attempts to assert control over the commandos brought down the government in April.

SOLDIER WAS KILLED

The fight that touched off the latest dispute began when the government ordered its troops to pull down an unauthorized building at the Nahr Al Bared refugee camp being used by the commandos. A Lebanese soldier was killed and three refugees were wounded.

A spokesman for the PLO in Beirut said that a five-man delegation headed by Brig. Abdel Razzak al Yehia, chief of staff of the Palestine Liberation Army, would start talks with the Lebanese authorities today.

PARTIAL BOYCOTT AT ST. LEONARD

Police Guard Students

MONTREAL (CP) — Police guarded elementary schools in suburban St. Leonard today as some children returned to classes amid a dispute over English-language education rights.

Only one-third to one-half the English-speaking children turned up after a decision by parents to boycott the schools until the government offers an acceptable solution to the community's school language problem.

Robert Beale, president of the St. Leonard Parents Association, an English-speaking group fighting for the retention of English-language schools in the suburb, said 1,800 to 1,900 of the suburb's 2,500 English-speaking children stayed home today.

Jerome Le Royer school reported that 42 per cent of its 22 English-speaking children were in school, while 84 per cent of the French-speaking children were there. Other schools said they were unable to provide attendance figures immediately.

Mr. Beale said English-speaking parents on the weekend unanimously rejected government proposals either to establish an English-language private school in the area or to give English-language instruction in the existing schools on a limited basis.

Mr. Beale said the parents also voted unanimously to avoid future violent clashes with the French bilingualist Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire which has been leading the fight to abolish English-language instruction in St. Leonard's Roman Catholic elementary school system.

Violence flared last Wednesday at a meeting organized by the LIS when parents opposed to integration clashed with LIS supporters in a school gymnasium.

Classes in St. Leonard are starting five days later than those in the rest of the province. Official reason for the delay was that teachers were taking a crash course in new teaching methods.

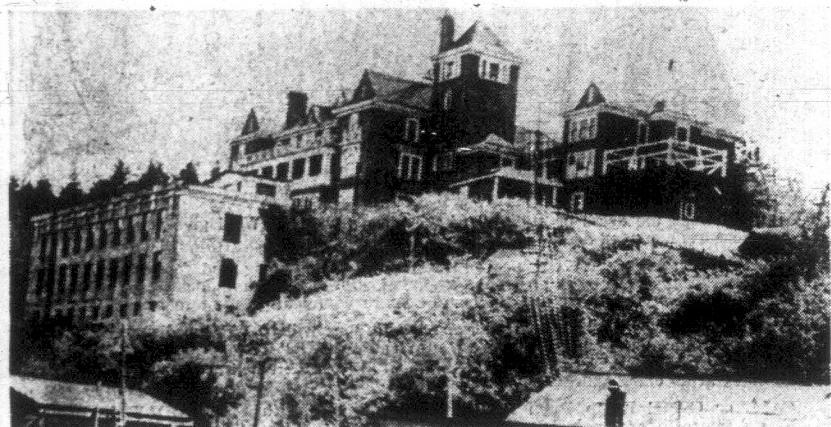

CLUTCHING their instruction sheets, Linda and Lois Flavelle, 18-year-old twins, 1716 Newton, wend their way through registration at the University of Victoria. The Victoria High graduates both won $100 scholarships from the Canadian Union of Public Employees and are ready for classes next Monday. (William E. John photos.)

Longshoremen to Seek Strike Vote Approval

THE ANGRY, THE AGED CHARLOTTE'S TOPIC

Dr. Charlotte Whitton, five times mayor of Ottawa and now an alderman, will address a meeting of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria in the Red Lion Inn, Monday, October 20, at noon.

Her subject will be "The Angry, The Anxious and The Aging".

NDP leader T. C. Douglas will speak on "Canada: United, and Independent", at a Canadian Club meeting in the Red Lion Motor Inn Monday, September 22, at noon.

RCMP Supt. D. G. Fraser, of Ottawa, will address a meeting of the Canadian Club in the Empress Hotel, Wednesday, November 19, at noon. His subject will be "Organized Crime in Canada".

Vancouver Island locals of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union will meet tonight to seek approval for a strike vote, tentatively set for Thursday and Friday.

Mainland longshoremen will meet Wednesday to seek approval on the vote.

The 3,200 longshoremen have been working without a contract since July 31 and have rejected a conciliation board recommendation for a 70-cent hourly wage increase over two years on the current rate of $3.88.

The strike vote is designed to strengthen the union's hand in negotiation with employers.

Elsewhere, negotiations continue with little progress among 1,300 towboat officers and 700 workers and 30 companies.

The cable station, abandoned in 1959, is situated at the end of a 7,000-mile communications cable to Australia. The cable was laid in 1902, and the station once had a staff of 45.

The Bamfield station was built in 1902 as the North American link on a 7,000-mile cable to Australia designed to provide secret communication between Commonwealth countries.

The station's main building provided accommodation for a staff of 20 operators. By the mid-1950s staff had increased to 45.

In 1959, however, the station was abandoned and operated by remote control from Port Alberni. In 1962 the original telegraph cable was replaced by a newer cable capable of transmitting telephone messages to Australia, New Zealand and Asia.

When the station became obsolete it was taken over and put up for sale by Canadian Overseas Telecommunications, a crown corporation.

During the North Africa campaign of the Second World War a high percentage of messages went through Bamfield in scrambled form from Africa en route to the London War Office.

Bamfield's harbor was closely guarded during both world wars. Anti-submarine guns covered the harbor entrance, which the station overlooks, and an infantry detachment stood 24-hour watch over the installation.

LINEUPS WERE LONG this morning at the University of Victoria gymnasium, as 5,000 students began to register for the university's winter term. Registration continues through Thursday.

Wrecking-Spree Hits Low-Rental Project

Vandals struck at the new Rose-Blanshard housing project twice over the weekend wrecking doors and windows and causing several hundred dollars in damage.

It marked the first wrecking-spree since construction of the 184-low rental housing units started early this summer. And it could set off a series of delays which will gradually push occupancy deadlines back into 1970.

Ted Bowers of Wheaton Construction Ltd. said this morning that in addition to the damage, the delays in replacing doors, windows and light fixtures could seriously affect the project time-table.

"We are running on an extremely tight delivery schedule," Bowers said. "All suppliers in the area are extremely busy at this time of year, but, because of the nature of this particular project, are giving us tremendous service."

"SENSELESS."

"The problem arises when we get a senseless wave of vandalism like this with key components wrecked or heavily damaged. That means a complete re-order from the supplier and sometimes a delay of weeks before he can fill that order."

Night patrols of the area have already been stepped up in anticipation of a "follow the leader" wave of vandalism.

Bill Hooson, assistant to the city manager of Victoria, asked private citizens to play their part in keeping the housing project on schedule.

"Even with 14 patrols a night there are obviously gaps over a 24-hour period," Hooson said. "If any citizen passing the project spots anything untoward going on I would urge them to call the police immediately."

"It isn't just a matter of protecting the contractor. These houses are desperately needed and we must all do everything

Q. What exactly is a Canada Council Medal? What is it awarded for?

A. Created in 1961, a Canada Council Medal honors a career rather than a particular work in the arts, humanities or social sciences. It is accompanied by a tax-free $2,500.

Twenty-nine have been awarded including one to Mungo Martin, chief of the Kwakiutl on Vancouver Island, for his recording of Indian songs and legends. He died in 1962.

HEART-VIEWING SCOPE DONATED TO HOSPITAL

St. Joseph's Hospital was $1,000 richer after a Gyro Club luncheon at the hospital today.

The money, which will be used to buy a cardioscope for the operating room, was presented by Gyro President Bruce Humber.

"We raised the money throughout the year on various programs," said Humber.

He said the club has made similar donations to other hospitals in the past.

Doctors R. J. Forth and H. H. Macartney, both of St. Joseph's, thanked the 50 club members present, and spoke briefly on the use of the cardioscope.

A cardioscope is an instrument for examining the interior of the heart.

'Set Example' The United Way

The United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal is getting too big for a haphazard approach, canvassers for the federal civil service portion of the campaign were told today.

Appeal Chairman Peter Darling said the campaign will soon be trying to raise $1 million every year, and that requires organization.

He told the meeting of about 200 canvassers they must be salesmen for the appeal.

Hugh Cameron, chairman of the campaign's federal service division, said every person in the service must be approached.

You can't wait for them to come to you."

The objective of the federal service, he said, is to reach the quota and to encourage wage deductions. That would amount to 25 cents per pay cheque or "a bottle of beer every two weeks."

This year their goal is $52,000. In last year's appeal, federal civil servants raised $48,445 toward a goal of $50,000.

The goal this year for the appeal's 24 member agencies is $694,000, up from $650,000 last year when the amount fell $5,000 short.

Commodore R. V. Henning of CFB Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard, said the United Appeal is one way federal employees who move from place to place, can contribute to their community. The commodore is vice-chairman of this year's appeal.

Through the appeal, he said, "we can meet our moral obligation to the rest of the community and set an example for others to follow."

He Starred at History's Turning Points

By ROBERT C. JENSEN

WASHINGTON (W.P.) — Everett McKinley Dirksen, a lawmaker whose flamboyant theatrical style almost concealed the fact that he was one of the senate's most skilled legislative leaders, died Sunday at Walter Reed Army Hospital. He was 72.

The senate minority leader had undergone a three-hour

operation last Tuesday for removal of a part of his right lung after discovery of a cancerous tumor.

He died Sunday at 1:52 p.m. (PDT), two hours after he suffered a cardiac and respiratory arrest.

The Illinois Republican has been in ill health for several years. He suffered from emphysema — a debilitating lung disease — a persistent heart ailment and stomach disorders. But he always seemed to shake off his ailments and maintain a vigorous daily schedule.

President Nixon called the senator's death the loss of "a great American — a legislator of matchless skills and my warm personal friend."

Former president Lyndon B. Johnson sent a private message of condolence to Mrs. Dirksen.

Sen. Dirksen's office said he would be buried in Pekin, Ill., his hometown.

All arrangements for the funeral were incomplete.

Senator Dirksen had been a heavy cigarette smoker for years. In recent months he tried to quit and stopped carrying cigarettes, but he continued to borrow them from others.

At the time of his death Dirksen was serving his tenth year as a senate minority leader. During that time, in the words of Robert C. Albright, longtime senate correspondent for the Washington Post, Senator Dirksen "was a newspaperman's politician."

"Part Pagliacci, part Hamlet, part ham, he could play any role in the political handbook, and did," Albright wrote. "To the surprise of nearly everyone, he starred near the end of his life at some of history's great turning points in the role he played best — that of statesman."

Senator Dirksen played a crucial role in the passage of the civil rights act of 1964 and the ratification of the nuclear test ban treaty in 1963.

Both issues depended on securing a two-thirds vote of the senate — for closure to end the filibuster in the civil rights bill and for ratification of the treaty. On both issues Dirksen had the power to deliver or withhold the Republican votes needed for the two-thirds majority.

But despite powerful pressures from within his party, he delivered the votes.

Toward the close of the debate on the nuclear test ban treaty, Senator Dirksen wound up an emotional description of the atomic attack on Hiroshima in 1945 with these words:

"The whole bosom of God's earth was ruptured by a man-made contrivance that we call a nuclear weapon."

In the 17 years since then, he pointed out, nothing much had been done to prevent a far more devastating reoccurrence. He said the test ban treaty was the "first small step" toward doing that and he was prepared to make that step.

When the civil rights act was first proposed, Senator Dirksen opposed it and declared, "they are remaking America and you won't like it."

But during the months of the senate's longest filibuster he worked behind the scenes with then senate majority whip Hubert H. Humphrey to fashion a bill that would gain the support of the senate Republicans.

Just before closure was voted Senator Dirksen took a line from Victor Hugo and said, "Stronger than all the armies is the idea whose time has come."

And then he told a hushed chamber: "The time has come for equality in sharing in government and education, and in employment. It will not be stayed or denied. It is here."

But despite his constructive roles in historic events, it was difficult to take Senator Dirksen seriously.

Reporter Albright wrote that the senator "en adored the clown's cap and bells. He liked nothing better than to break into a sedate senate discussion with a funny story, often at his own expense. His rhapsodic flights in fulsome praise of the marigold, which he wanted to make the national flower, are now part of senate lore."

Senator Dirksen, unlike so many of his colleagues, did not lean on the carefully prepared speech text. Even on the most important occasions, he relied only on notes he had scribbled to organize his thoughts.

He drew on his vast knowledge of the Bible, Shakespeare and world literature — and on a voice that could be played like a cathedral organ.

He could draw out the stops and declaim like a thundering prophet. And in the next breath his voice could drop to the softest whisper and he would let his audience hang on every word.

Detractors and even some of his admirers liked to refer to the Dirksen forensic ability in such derisive terms as "Old Honey Tonsils," "The Wizard of Ooze," "His tonsils are marinated in Honey" and "Oleaginous Ev."

All this tended to overshadow his ability as a legislative leader. In many ways, Senator Dirksen was the Republican counterpart to Lyndon B. Johnson when he was the senate majority leader. Like Johnson, Senator Dirksen had a genius for accommodating the conflicting political pressures for finding the key to agreement, compromise, or Johnson's favorite term, consensus.

Like Johnson, Senator Dirksen also understood the political motives and the personal strengths and weaknesses of individual senators and how to use this knowledge to achieve his goal.

He and Johnson had a warm, close personal relationship that extended back to their days in the house together during the 1930s and the 1940s. When Johnson became president in 1963 Senator Dirksen was among the first of the Capitol leaders he called to the White House.

Other Republicans also were embarrassed by Senator Dirksen's vigorous efforts to have Otto Otepka, the deposed state department security officer, appointed to a well-paying sinecure on the subversive activities control board.

By mid-year the grumbling by younger colleagues in the Republican cloakroom had grown louder and there was talk of trying to replace Dirksen as GOP leader after the 1970 elections.

But changing positions and changing fortunes were nothing new to Senator Dirksen.

The Chicago Sun Times once reported that in his 16 years in the house he changed his mind 62 times on foreign policy matters, 31 times on military affairs and 70 times on agriculture.

Much the same could be said about his choices for the Republican presidential nomination. In 1940 he backed the late Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio. In 1944 and 1948 he worked for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. But in 1948 he was again in the Taft camp and opposing Dewey's choice of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

His denunciation of Dewey at the 1952 Republican national convention has become a legendary political story.

The 1952 convention was the first national convention that was given national television coverage and during the debate over seating rival Taft and Eisenhower delegations, Senator Dirksen was at the podium. He pointed his finger directly at Dewey, who was seated with the New York delegation, and said:

"We followed you before," and he paused dramatically before continuing, "and you took us down the road to defeat."

The reaction from the floor was fierce. The Eisenhower partisans booted. The Taft partisans cheered.

At the podium, Senator Dirksen looked surprised. He paused and with his usual dramatic flair, sipped from a cup of water. Then he said:

"I did not mean to precipitate a controversy."

In 1961, Sen. Dirksen and then house minority leader at that time Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, held a series of weekly news conferences to voice the Republican opposition to the Kennedy administration.

The sessions, which were filmed for television, came to be known as the "Ev and Charlie Show," and drew the criticism of some liberal

Republicans, who said the sessions gave the impression that the GOP was led by tired old men who believed in standing still.

Senator Dirksen was born on Jan. 4, 1896, in Pekin, Ill., a town of 22,000 in the central part of the state.

His father who was a staunch Republican named his

after the president, and
